McGOVERN IN SOUTH

Senator Denounces Nixonites As Racist

. . . He Aims To Relieve Dixie 'Anxieties'

Little Rock, Ark. (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern unfolded a southern strategy of his own Tuesday, while denouncing President Nixon's administration as racist.

McGovern said one of the principal reasons he is devoting three days to stumping in Dixie was to relieve "anxieties" of southern governors and Democratic Party leaders about his tax, welfare, and defense spending proposals.

"The basic purpose of this trip," McGovern said, "is to demonstrate this is a national campaign and that we are not writing off the South, that we will be back here in the fall if we get the nomination."

McGovern Meets Bumpers

McGovern met with Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers, one of the "moderate voices of the new South" he has been praising throughout the trip.

He has scheduled meetings with Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Gov. John West of South Carolina Wednesday.

After spending two hours in conference with Bumpers and members of the Arkansas delegation to the Democratic National Convention, the two emerged and Bumpers said at news conference he would support McGovern in November if he is the party's presidential nominee.

The main stumbling block to Bumpers' support of McGovern had been the senator's welfare program.

"Sen. McGovern had told us he will detail a positive program, easy to articulate and to understand," Bumpers said.

Bumpers said much would hinge on the Democratic platform as far as McGovern's chances of carrying the state went. He said with a good platform, "Arkansas will support the Democratic nominee."

McGovern said there was no discussion among the 27-member Arkansas delegation, which is pledged to Rep. Wilbur D. Mills.

No Direct Pitch

"We did not make any direct pitch to the delegates," McGovern said. "I said I understood they were committed to the congressman . . . but I am hopeful of their support."

Earlier, McGovern told 1,000 cheering supporters at a downtown rally, "The conventional wisdom is that I have very little chance of carrying the South."

The South Dakota senator, who picked up the endorsement of the Arkansas Gazette, said this "conventional wisdom" comes from the press and the Republican Party.

"But they may be in for one of the biggest surprises of their lives," McGovern said. "I believe that if we can get our message across in the South we are going to take this area away from Nixon next November."

The Arkansas Gazette urged the 27 delegates representing the state at next month's Democratic National Convention to immediately declare themselves for McGovern if they are leaning toward the senator.

The delegation is currently pledged to Mills.

McGovern came to Arkansas from San Antonio, Tex., where he talked privately to newspaper executives and then held a public news conference. At the private talks he said he had a five-year plan for phasing out the oil depletion allowance.

AID Official Says U.S. Better Off When Other Countries Better Off

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

An official of the Agency for International Development said here Tuesday that he's convinced the U.S. is "better off when other countries are better off."

"We benefit when other countries are wealthy," said Dr. Adward C. Fei, a native of China who is now regional coordinator for Africa in the AID office in Washington.

An economist, Fei said his main duties are to insure that AID programs in Africa are doing what they are intended to do.

At a luncheon with representatives of the University of Nebraska, the city of Lincoln and the state, community leaders and other educators, Fei said he would argue that foreign aid is an investment in the future of the world.

But he also cautioned that "in the short run we aren't going to get the kind of reward we think about."

Foreign aid, he said, "doesn't buy friends and in the short run influence people."

But he also noted that such past experiences as the $22 billion pumped into the Marshall Plan have indicated the long-run success factor built into foreign aid.

"We shouldn't doubt that ($22 billion) paid off well for the future of the free world," he said.

Noting the relative position of the U.S. in terms of world aid, Fei said he was pleased that more countries are carrying their share of the load.

But he also noted the U.S. is spending .3% of its gross national product on foreign aid, a percentage that puts us at 13th in a per capita ranking worldwide.

"It's difficult for me to believe somehow we can't do that," he said, noting the U.S. foreign aid program has met with more domestic criticism recently.

Later, talking with members of a university class studying modern Africa, Fei said some of the most successful programs get little public notice.

He said a recent campaign in which the U.S. was involved has nearly wiped out smallpox in Africa and similar efforts have opened up vast new agricultural lands as malaria has disappeared.

The "real bottlenecks to development," in Africa, Fei said, are political and social rather than economic, however.

Underdeveloped nations, he said, need "dedicated leadership" that lasts for several generations through hard times when movement up the economic ladder is very slow.

Fei, who has been on the AID staff since 1962, was in Lincoln to spend a day visiting with faculty, students and community leaders.

Rapid City Mayor Presented Check

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Rapid City Mayor Don Barnett said Tuesday that cleanup and rehabilitation operations in Rapid City are "progressing fairly well."

In Lincoln to receive the initial results of the Bonanza International restaurant chain's 4-day-old fund raising effort, Barnett said the biggest problem now facing the city was to find housing for the approximately 2,500 families left homeless.

He said that with the aid of federal funds temporary trailer courts are being set up and stricken families will be allowed to live there one year without rent.

He estimated that all the homeless would have housing by at least the end of July.

Barnett said he was very impressed with the efforts of federal agencies as well as private organizations.

"If they (the federal agencies) come through like they say they are going to, this is going to be a textbook case of how to recover from a flood," he said.

Barnett said that the number of tourists visiting the Black Hills is beginning to return to pre-flood levels.

He stressed that the flood had negligible effect on the Black Hills.

The check-presentation ceremony, complete with parade, took the place of a traditional grand opening for the Lincoln Bonanza Steak House at 84th and O.

Although the checks gathered so far by the restaurant chain had not been totaled, Bonanza President Webb Lowe said the amount was between $2,000 and $3,000.

The Parade from the Gateway Shopping Center to the new restaurant included 4-H members on horseback and a small covered wagon carrying Mayor Barnett.

The fund-raising idea was originated by Larry Miller, who has a half interest in Bonanza restaurants in Lincoln and Omaha.

Miller said that all 251 Bonanza Steak Houses were involved in the effort, but he noted that eight of the restaurants on the East Coast had been damaged by flooding there. He speculated that contributions from the East would be smaller.

While one segment of the fund-raising effort consists of soliciting voluntary contributions from customers, contributions are also coming from the restaurant owners themselves.

The 13 restaurants in Iowa, Nebraska and both Dakotas have each pledged $1 for each of the 125 miles between Sioux City and Omaha that Kim McGinness of Iowa covered on horseback.

Kim, who traveled over the weekend, was joined in Omaha by Linda Winks, of Omaha.

Barnett said that contributions for flood victims now total about $500,000. He said that most of the contributions had come from South Dakota and Nebraska.

The funds are handled by the volunteer members of the Rapid City Disaster Foundation, and are dispersed on a cash grant basis to "people who really need help," according to Barnett.

Mayor Barnett, who is spending much of his time hopping around the country receiving contributions for flood relief and pleading for tourists, stopped in Sioux City later Tuesday to pick up about $24,000 collected by a television station there.

Rapid City Toll From Flooding Stands At 230

Rapid City, S.D. (AP) — The death toll in Rapid City now stands at 230.

Searchers said the body of the latest flood victim, 31-year-old Hames Toutges of Lead, was found in a creek about five miles north of the Black Hills community.

The flash flood three weeks ago tossed houses and cars around like toys and left thousands homeless.

The list of missing in the flood disaster, which once contained thousands of names, has been reduced to about 25.

Youth Steals Airplane, Nosedives To His Death

Redding, Calif. (AP) — A youth stole a small plane and performed dive and loop stunts for almost four hours Tuesday before he nosedived to his death, after ignoring warnings he was running out of gas, sheriff's deputies said.

Deputy Jon Kelbaugh talked on ground to air radio to the youth for 15 minutes before the crash, but said the flyer refused to give a reason for his actions.

"I tried to talk him down but he wouldn't come down," Kelbaugh said. "Then all of a sudden it was all over.

Authorities said the pilot was advised the plane should be about out of gas.

The victim was identified as Robert D. Lively, 25, a former Redding resident who had been living with his mother near Cupertino.

The stunts were over an area northeast of here called Central Valley, deputies said.

Lively's mother, Betty Lynch, said her son had planned to marry a girl who lived in Central Valley, but the girl married someone else.

"It sounds like he wanted to die, doesn't it?" said his mother, although she was unable to explain why her son was flying the plane.

Sheriff's officers said Lively stole a single-engine Alon A2 from the Enterprise Flying Club where he had formerly been a student pilot. He began flying about 3 a.m. and crashed about 7 a.m.

An eyewitness said it appeared Lively ran out of gas because the plane was about 70 feet off the ground near a deserted airstrip when the engine stopped suddenly and the plane nosedived to the ground.

Kelbaugh, who had known Lively in Redding, said there was no indication in the radio conversation that Lively "was under the influence of anything."

A coroner's deputy said Lively died at the crash scene.

Two Bombs Shatter Calm Of Fragile Truce In Ulster

Belfast, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two bombs shattered the calm of Northern Ireland's fragile new truce Tuesday night and British troops were called in to halt street fighting between Protestant and Roman Catholic youths.

The bombs, both planted in cars, exploded in quick succession in East Belfast. Both were in a Protestant neighborhood.

Security officials said there were no casualties, but houses in the vicinity were damaged.

The street clashes broke out on the opposite side of the city. Youths threw stones back and forth at each other until the troops moved in to keep them apart.

The bombs were believed to be the work either of dissidents of the Irish Repubican Army or else of militant Protestants, irrate over the truce agreement between the IRA and British authorities administering the province.

The truce was the first in three years of violence.

Militants of the Irish Republican Army hid their guns and bombs in secret caches.

Patrols of Britain's 15,000-man security force began quietly vanishing from city streets and returning to their outposts.

It was the start of a frail cease-fire that came into force at midnight as the result of an offer by the Provisional wing of the IRA.

Sergeant Lured To Death

Minutes earlier, the three-year-old insurrection involving Protestants and Roman Catholics had claimed its 389th victim — a British sergeant lured to his death in an ambush. Hours later, a Catholic truck driver, gunned down mysteriously in Belfast, took the toll to 390.

Although random rifle shots disturbed the eerie quiet of the Ulster summer, it seemed as if words, not bullets, would become the order of the day.

"We have now won a valuable breathing space," declared a British minister for Northern Ireland, Paul Channon. "The talking can start in real earnest."

Channon was referring to the plan launched by the British government to arrange talks that will give all shades of Irish opinion a voice in peace making.

But for that plan to be fulfilled a major obstacle has to be cleared.

Leaders of the Protestant majority have vowed not to negotiate with either the Marxist Official wing of the IRA or with the ultranationalist Provisional wing. The Official IRA laid down its arms last month.

Lone Gunman Robs Union Loan And Savings

A lone gunman held up the Union Loan and Savings Association's branch office at 5555 O during the noon hour Tuesday, and fled with nearly $1,600.

Lincoln police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation joined in the search for the gunman, who was described in his mid-20's and wearing a dark gray business suit.

Witnesses told police that the man had walked into the branch office, looked around for a few moments, and then went up to a teller window.

He put a bank-type, drawstring bag on the counter in front of Mrs. Mary A. Jensen, 20, of 3770 B, and pulled a handgun from his waistband.

"Don't say anything," he warned Mrs. Jensen, who started placing money from a cash drawer into the bag.

Another employe, Mrs. Sam Stehr of 1730 No. 62nd, told police that she had noticed Mrs. Jensen putting "money in the bag from the drawer without counting it," and went to tell Frank Vogt, a loan officer.

However, the man disappeared from the teller window before she had moved very far from the area, according to police.

Police said the gunman fled through the west door of the Union Loan office, and dropped over an eight to 10 foot retaining wall to the Golden West Steak restaurant's parking lot where he drove off in a light yellow or buff colored two-door Buick hardtop.

Police said a silent alarm was tripped during the holdup, but the guman remained at the teller window only a minute or so.

Ralph Whyman, a Union Loan vice president, said "several hundred dollars" were taken in the holdup, but declined to reveal the exact amount.

Police also declined, at the insistence of Whyman, they said, to disclose the amount taken, but said the loot contained "several one hundred dollar bills."

However, The Star learned that the amount taken was "slightly less than $1,600."

Witnesses described the gunman as 25-30 years-old, 5-8 to 6 feet in height, slender build and weighing about 150 pounds, with dark hair and moustache. He was dressed in a gray or dark gray business suit.

Accident Claims A Second Victim

Anthony Booher, 30, of Pleasanton, Calif., died Tuesday in a Lincoln hospital from injuries resulting from a camper pickup truck accident last Saturday on Interstate 80 interchange near Pleasant Dale, according to the Lancaster County Sheriff's office.

His wife, Norma, 29, was killed instantly in the mishap when the camper pickup hit a guard rail, then struck a bridge abuttment, overturned and burned, according to investigating officers.

Investigating officers said Booher, who was driving, apparently fell asleep at the wheel in the 3 a.m. mishap.

Three children, Tammy Oehrlein, 10; Tracy Oehrlein, 8, and Rod Oehrlein, 5, were released from a Lincoln hospital after treatment for injuries.

New York Times News Summary

Increased Strategic Spending Backed By House

(c) New York Times News Service

Washington — The House overwhelmingly endorsed President Nixon's proposal to increase strategic spending in the wake of the recently concluded arms control agreements with the Soviet Union. The House passed a $21.3-billion military procurement bill that authorizes the $1.3 billion budget increase sought by the administration. (More on Page 2.)

Drastic Changes Proposed

London — After nearly eight years of deliberations and consultations, a committee of judges and jurists in London issued an official report recommending drastic changes in criminal law procedure that would remove some of a defendant's built-in advantages. The erosion of such protective rights was immediately condemned by liberal lawyers' groups and the Council of Civil Liberties.

Go-Between Role Grew

Washington — Newly disclosed sections of the Pentagon Papers show that the Soviet Union, after first rebuffing American requests in 1965 to serve as middleman in ending the Vietnam war, became progressively more interested in acting as go-between for Washington and Hanoi. But Moscow always seemed reluctant to put pressure on North Vietnam to give up its struggle, the papers add. (More on Page 17.)

Thieu's Power Increased

Saigon — In an extraordinary session of the South Vietnamese senate, pro-government senators pushed through a bill giving President Nguyen Van Thieu authority to rule by decree on matters of defense and economics for six months. The action, which took place with none of the opposition senators present, is certain to be challenged in the South Vietnamese Supreme Court. (More on Page 2.)

Snub-Nose Gun Ban Favored

Washington — The Senate Judiciary Committee, reflecting congressional concern over the attempted assassination of Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, voted 12 to 2 to ban the manufacture and sale of most snub-nosed handguns. (More on Page 2.)

Demo Platform Ready

Washington — A platform acceptable to Sen. George S. McGovern and his two chief rivals for the presidential nominations, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, is ready for presentation to the Democratic National Convention. A long list of minority reports filed with the committee assure that the most controversial issues will be fought out on the floor of the convention.

Boyle Sentenced

Washington — The 70-year-old president of the United Mine Workers of America, W. A. Boyle, was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $130,000 for making illegal political contributions with union funds. (More on Page 8.)

Senate Votes For $30 Billion

Washington — The Senate voted more than $30 billion in appropriations for federal health and education programs, an increase of over $2 billion above what President Nixon requested in his budget for the next fiscal year. (More on Page 18.)

Five Inspectors Arrested

New York — Five building department inspectors were arrested after they allegedly took bribes from a builder at virtually every phase of his construction of a day-care center. The arrests were announced by Robert K. Ruskin, the city's investigation commissioner.

S. Viet Infantry Repels Attackers West Of Hue

World News

Saigon (AP) — North Vietnamese forces attacked three government positions west of the Hue under a rain of mortar fire Tuesday but were repulsed in heavy fighting by South Vietnamese infantrymen.

Military communiques and field reports said more than 70 enemy were killed in the battles 10 to 15 miles west of the former imperial capital.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported one of the attacks on the northern front was preceded by a 760-round mortar barrage and cost the enemy 45 killed and many weapons and explosives captured. Government losses were listed as nine killed and 33 wounded.

Two other ground attacks, both preceded by mortar barrages of more than 400 rounds each, left 26 more enemy killed but cost no friendly casualties, South Vietnamese spokesmen said.

Tuesday was the 90th day of the North Vietnamese offensive and the eighth day of sharp fighting and enemy shelling attacks on the northern front along the My Chanh River. Casualty figures from several battles Monday listed 148 enemy killed and two prisoners captured with 49 South Vietnamese dead and 149 wounded.

U.S. fighter-bombers sweeping along the front knocked out three enemy long-range artillery pieces after a spotter plane saw them firing at Camp Evans, 16 miles northwest of Hue.

Putzel said the 130mm guns were found in rugged mountains 13 miles northwest of Camp Evans, in enemy-held Quang Tri Province.

The accuracy and range of the artillery was a major factor in the Communist command's initial advance through the province and allied commanders have placed top priority on knocking out the big guns. But pilots report many are hidden in caves or so well camouflaged they are impossible to spot even when firing.

B52s Continue Raids

U.S. B52 bombers continued their saturation strikes along the northern front, flying 33 raids Monday and Tuesday in South Vietnam's two northernmost provinces, Quang Tri and Thua Thien. Smaller American jets flew 240 more strikes in the South, more than half of them on the northern defense line. The fighter-bombers also made 320 raids Monday over North Vietnam.

The Navy reported 22 ships shelled enemy positions in South Vietnam, a one-day record, and at least two of the vessels came under fire from enemy shore batteries in Quang Tri. Neither was hit and several shore batteries were reported destroyed by counterfire.

In its daily report of bomb damage in North Vietnam Monday, the U.S. Command claimed hits on a thermal power plant northwest of Haiphong and damage or destruction of four more bridges, a variety of military installations, weapons, vehicles and a petroleum pumping station just above the demilitarized zone.

The command also announced a raid on the Bac Mai airfield and adjoining storage warehouses just two miles from the center of Hanoi, the closest strike to the North Vietnamese capital since American planes resumed full-scale bombing in April. Four warehouses were reported destroyed and nine others damaged but there was no indication of enemy aircraft losses at Bac Mai, which serves as an auxiliary MIG base.

10 Planes Claimed

Hanoi claimed 10 U.S. planes were downed Tuesday, including four cut down in a "fierce dogfight."

Five were shot down over Hanoi, and a sixth elsewhere. One pilot was captured, said the dispatch from the official Vietnam News Agency.

Hanoi said in an earlier dispatch that six American aircraft were shot down and some of the pilots captured Monday. It claims 33 U.S. planes have been downed over the North in the last week.

The U.S. Command has reported one plane loss in North Vietnam for that period, an Air Force F4 Phantom shot down last Wednesday with both crewmen missing.

MUSHROOM BALL, ANYONE?

Some persons look far and wide for mushrooms but all Jack Peterson, 13, had to do was open a dresser drawer at his home in Des Moines, Iowa. There he found the softball he'd tucked in the drawer after bringing it in from the backyard, and out of the softball was growing "this thing." His father, Frank, reasoned a spore had lodged in a seam and in the dark interior of the drawer had blossomed.

President Wins Viet War Vote

Washington (UPI) — In its first war vote of the year, the House gave President Nixon a solid victory Tuesday, rejecting 245 to 152 a measure seeking an end to U.S. military involvement in Indochina by Sept. 1.

Members rejected an amendment to a $21.3 billion weapons authorization that would have barred spending any funds in the bill on U.S. combat activities in or over Indochina after Sept. 1, subject only to the return of U.S. prisoners of war and a safe withdrawal of remaining American forces.

The House then passed the measure, 334 to 59, and sent it to the Senate.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., was essentially symbolic since the funds involved were earmarked for spending far into the future. Nevertheless it marked the first test of sentiment in the House on President Nixon's current military and diplomatic program for settling the Vietnam's dispute.

While a relatively few spectators watched the debate in the House, about 100 notables in the arts, theatre and sciences were arrested outside the Senate in a non-violent protest against the war.

Although the House has always supported presidents on Vietnam, doves suffered somewhat of a setback Tuesday. The 152 votes they mustered fell short of their 238 to 163 loss last year on an amendment that would have cut off all funds for U.S. combat activities in Indochina after June 1, 1972.

Doves hit their high-water mark on Nov. 19, 1971, when the House rejected 215 to 193 a "policy" amendment calling for a withdrawal by within six months.

On another war-related action, lawmakers on a voice vote defeated an amendment by Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., aimed at forbidding U.S. planes from bombing dikes, dams and hydraulic systems in North Vietnam.

Bill Pushed Through Giving Thieu Limited Dictatorship

The New York Times

Saigon — In an extraordinary session of the South Vietnamese Senate Tuesday night, progovernment senators pushed through a bill giving President Nguyen Van Thieu authority to rule by decree on matters of defense and economics for six months. The vote was 26 to 0.

The action, which came more than an hour after the 10 p.m. curfew in the capital, with no opposition senators present, was certain to be challenged in the South Vietnamese Supreme Court.

But the bill, which Thieu had requested in early May, will become law with his signature and it is unlikely that the cumbersome court system will be able to deal with the legal questions surrounding the passage of the measure within the six months that it is in effect.

A little more than two weeks ago, the senate rejected a bill which would have given Thieu decree powers for six months but which did not limit them to any specific areas.

Judiciary Panel Okays Ban On Small Pistols

Washington (AP) — A bill to ban the commercial sale of snub-nosed, easily concealable handguns not suitable for sporting purposes won the approval of the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief sponsor of the measure, said it would "take out of the market place the wapons used most frequently by criminals . . . without diminishing the opportunities of sportsmen and marksmen" to acquire pistols.

The committee approved Bayh's bill by a 12-2 vote after rejecting, 9 to 5, a rival measure by Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., to set safety and reliability standards for handguns.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., tried to amend Bayh's bill to require registration of all firearms and the licensing of owners but lost by one-sided margins.

Jarred Loose

Bayh's long-dormant bill was jarred loose by the attempted assassination last month of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace at a shopping center in nearby Laurel, Md.

Bayh said his bill would prohibit the sale of guns of the type used in the shooting of Wallace and the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., in 1968.

The only committee members voting against Bayh's bill, which now goes to the Senate for action, were Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and John L. McClellan D-Ark.

Voting for it, in addition to Bayh, were Hruska, Kennedy and Sens. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., Quentin Burdick, N-N.D., John V. Tunney, D-Calif., Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., Edward J. Burney, R-Fla., Hiram L. Fong, R-Hawaii, Charles Mathias, R-Md., Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Marlow Cook, R-Ky.

Limits On Length

Bayh's bill would prohibit the sale, except to law-enforcement officers, research organizations, and government agencies, of revolvers with less than a 3-inch barrel and of pistols with an over-all length of less than six inches.

Bayh said about 2.6 million handguns are sold annually in the United States. His bill would eliminate about a million.

Hruska's bill drew the support of Eastland, McClellan, Thurmond and Gurney when it was offered as a substitute for Bayh's bill.

Kennedy's amendment to require the registration of rifles and shotguns as well as handguns was rejected 11-3. Only Tunney and Fong voted with Kennedy.

Defeated by 10-4 votes were Kennedy amendments to require the licensing of all firearms and the licensing of handguns only. Hart joined with Kennedy, Tunney and Fong in voting for these amendments.

Hart has introduced a bill to outlaw the ownership and sale of all handguns, but he didn't bring it up for a vote in the Judiciary Committee. However, Hart said he intends to force a vote on it in the Senate when Bayh's bill comes up for debate.

Nixon Statement On Troop Levels Due By Friday

Washington (AP) — The White House left open Tuesday the exact timing of a news conference President Nixon has promised for this week, but said he would have his statement on Vietnam troop levels "by Friday."

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the President has not yet decided about his news conference, which he has announced would be held this week on topics of general interest, including domestic and foreign policy.

Ziegler said the news conference could be held Thursday or Friday. "It could, however, fall later," he said.

Nixon has promised to make a statement about the Vietnam troop levels, which he has ordered down to 49,000 men by July 1. That is due by Friday, Ziegler confirmed, and he told reporters, "it will come before the end of the week, but not today."

Threat Of New Crisis In Money Setup Eases

London (AP) — The threat of a new world monetary crisis eased Tuesday when the dollar steadied after a sharp drop last week and the British pound limited its downward float.

Currency dealers said markets were reacting favorably to the decision by European finance ministers at an emergency meeting in Luxembourg Monday to defend most existing exchange rates.

Britain's surprise decision Friday to float the pound outside fixed rates had raised the specter of wider adjustments affecting European currencies, the dollar and the Japanese yen.

The British announcement touched off a run against the dollar and forced many European money markets to close in confusion.

The initial test of whether the Luxembourg meeting has restored some confidence came when the London foreign exchange market opened for the first time since the float.

The pound quickly dropped from its old parity of $2.60 to a low for the day of $2.47. But it partly recovered later and closed at $2.50, in effect a devaluation of about 3%.

Market sources said the pound had floated freely, without any support buying from the Bank of England. There was no sign of any rush on the pound.

Although the London market was active, dealers said big traders appeared to be staying on the sidelines waiting developments.

There was some concern that the pound could face tougher pressure Wednesday when major European foreign exchange markets reopen for the first time since Friday.

But one banking source said trading could well be lighter then, since much of Tuesday's business came from clearing up the backlog of orders from the long weekend.

The Zurich foreign exchange market was open. The dollar improved slightly and the pound followed the London pattern.

Financial sources cautioned, however, that it was too early to write off the threat of another monetary crisis.

The pound, the original cause of concern, remains weak because of inflation in Britain, foreign trade losses and labor unrest. A sharper downward float of the pound could still force other readjustments before the end of the year.

These could come in the form of wider floating by other currencies, or in stiffer national controls on foreign exchange dealings.

The Danish krone is already floating as a result of the British decision and the Italian lira is struggling to maintain parity.

The Swiss government has applied stiff new controls on foreign investment which sent the Swiss stock market plummeting.

In London, Prime Minister Edward Heath again ruled out a wage freeze and other belt tightening measures which could help in the long run to limit the downward float of the pound.

Nixon Asks Relief Funds For Flooding

Washington (AP) — President Nixon is asking Congress to vote $100 million in federal funds for emergency relief in five flood-stricken eastern states, the White House said Tuesday.

The chief executive also is sending Vice President Spiro T. Agnew on a two-day fact-finding tour of cities in Virginia, Maryland and New York, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler announced.

The $100 million request was sent to Capitol Hill Tuesday with White House hopes it will be acted upon immediately.

The funds, Ziegler said, will go "to meet the near term obligations of the Office of Emergency Preparedness," which is coordinating federal disaster aid in Maryland, Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania and Florida — the five states hit hardest by flooding in the aftermath of Hurricane Agnes.

White House officials said the $100 million will be used to "prime the pump" for the start of repairs on bridges, highways and other public facilities.

While the appropriations request was triggered by the Huricane Agnes flooding, officials said it also could be used for other disasters such as the recent flooding at Rapid City, S.D.

Tax Hikes 'Exactly Wrong Answer'

©The New York Times

Washington — President Nixon's budget chief told Congress Tuesday that an increase in taxes "is exactly the wrong answer" to what he called the "ominous" trend toward a rise in government spending more rapid than the rise in receipts.

Sen. George McGovern, the leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has proposed tax increases of about $28 billion.

Caspar W. Weinberger, director of the Office of Management and Budget, warned that "it is clear that unless Congress wishes to force a huge tax increase, there must be some deletions if Congress wants new programs." The burden of his testimony was that "the major problem facing us now" was holding down the growth of spending.

Speaking of present taxes at all levels of government, he said, "We are already forcing contributions of more than one-third of the gross national product at all levels. That is too much; we must make every effort to lower it."

Weinberger testified before a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee with only one member present — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the chairman.

Interview Tries To Clarify McGovern's Income Plan

©The New York Times

By LEONARD SILK

New York — None of Sen. George McGovern's economic proposals has stirred up more controversy and confusion than his plan to grant $1,000 to every man, woman and child.

In Oklahoma City recently, McGovern disclosed that he was preparing a substitute welfare reform plan that would be somewhat less costly by providing grants or tax credits of $3,700 rather than $4,000 to a family of four, would benefit all families except those with incomes over $20,000, and would provide higher credits for adults than for young children.

Is the McGovern proposal feasible or would it still impose unbearably heavy tax burdens on upper-income earners? Is it a radical proposal or is it simply a more liberal variant of the negative income tax, originally proposed by the conservative University of Chicago economist, Milton Friedman?

In an effort to clarify the McGovern plan for income redistribution, we have interviewed one of the nation's leading tax authorities, Joseph A. Pechman, director of the economic studies of the Brookings Institution.

Question: What is the difference between McGovern's tax credit scheme and the negative income tax idea?

Answer: The two are very closely related. Under a negative income tax, every family is entitled to a minimum income, and its income is subject to tax, usually at a relatively high rate, say, 50%. If the minimum income guarantee is $2,400 for a family of four and the tax rate is 50%, the family would break even at $4,800. If the tax rate is 66 2-3% (as it is under the House version of HR1), the breakeven point would be $3,600. McGovern is suggesting a much higher basic minimum — initially $4,000 and now apparently $3,700 for a family of four — and a much lower tax rate—apparently about 33 1-3%.

What is new about McGovern's idea is that the negative income tax part of the plan is integrated with the positive income tax. Otherwise, many people who would be eligible to receive a check from the government — for the negative income tax part of the plan — would also have to pay taxes.

The tax credit idea combines the negative and positive income tax elements into one system, so that those who are below the breakeven point would receive one payment from the government and those who are above the breakeven point would make one payment to the government.

Q. But isn't the tax credit plan outrageously expensive?

A. It is expensive in the sense that the tax rates on income would have to be raised enough to cover the tax credits. An average $1,000 per capita credit would require gross outlays of about $210 billion with this year's population.

Q. Do you agree with Herbert Stein's (chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers) estimate that, with no change in the current tax law, the McGovern plan would require a flat federal income tax rate of 46% of taxable net income in addition to the income tax rates now in force?

A. Stein did not take into account that the McGovern plan would fold the present personal exemption of $750 and the standard deduction of (up to) $2,000 into the tax credit. Today's income tax raises about $95 billion at this year's income levels. To this must be added the $210 billion of per capita payments, making a total of $305 billion required to finance both the tax credit scheme and the present collections from the income tax. Since the tax base for this year should be about $663 billion, the average personal income tax rate to finance the original McGovern scheme and all other current expenditures would be 46%, not 46% on top of existing tax rates.

Q. But don't you think that an average 46% rate is still excessive?

A. Yes, indeed. But two things should be added: First, McGovern's tax base would be larger than it is now, because McGovern is in favor of substantial tax reform. I could easily add $50 billion to the tax base through tax reforms, and this alone would reduce the average tax rate from 46% to 43%.

Second, the tax credit scheme could not be put into effect before 1974 at the earliest. By that time, incomes will be perhaps 15% higher than they are in 1972. So, even without tax reform, the 1974 income tax base would be high enough to finance an average per capita payment of $1,000 at an average rate of 39%. With tax reform, the average rate need go no higher than 36½%.

Another way to look at the matter is that it is possible to finance an average per capita grant of $850 at this year's income levels and also raise the amount of tax now collected through the present income tax with an average tax rate of 36½%, if the tax base were increased by $50 billion through tax reform.

This would obviously be a great improvement over HR1, which has a minimum income guarantee of only $2,400 as compared to $3,600 for a family of four, and a tax rate on the poor and near-poor of 66 2-3% instead of 36½%.

Q. McGovern doesn't propose a flat rate on all income, does he?

A. To my knowledge, he hasn't said anything about this directly. But his numerical examples suggest that he's thinking of a tax rate of 33½% on at least the first $12,000 of income. If this is what he has in mind, he will have to have higher tax rates above $12,000.

Q. How high would he have to go?

A. Again, it all depends on the tax base. I could devise a tax base that would yield enough revenue with a rate structure reaching a maximum of no more than 45%. So one of the crucial elements of the whole plan is tax reform, to keep rates at moderate levels. Further, the plan would not be acceptable unless everybody pays his fair share of the tax burden. It is simply unfair to tax most people's incomes at rates ranging between 33 1-3% and 45 or 50% unless everybody is required to pay tax on his entire income.

Q. Is it true that families with incomes between $15,000 and $20,000 would pay very little, if any, more tax than they pay today?

A. It depends on which type of family you have in mind. A family of four with $20,000 income now pays a tax of $3,010, if it uses the standard deduction. Let's say it could itemize deductions of only $1,000 under the McGovern scheme, for state income tax, mortgage interest, and so on, so its taxable income would be $19,000. Suppose the tax rates were 33 1-3% on the first $12,000 and 40% on the next $7,000. Then this family would have a gross tax payment of $6,800 but it would receive a tax credit, according to his latest statement, of $3,700 making a net payment of only $3,100, or $90 more than it pays today.

Q. In that case, wouldn't the tax rates above $20,000 have to be confiscatory?

A. No, because the breakeven points would be much lower for smaller families and for single people.

Nixon Approves Bill Hiking SBA Loans

Washington (AP) — President Nixon signed a bill that increases the amount of loans the Small Business Administration may have outstanding at any onetime from $3.1 billion to $4.3 billion. It also makes some increases in the amounts of other SBA investment and loan programs.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Normally, the city would jump at the chance of getting a gift that could be worth $4 million to $6 million but such is not the case with Gateway Manor, the gift that has been offered to Lincoln at this time. One doubts that the City Council will ever come to a decision in the matter that meets with overwhelming approval.

On the surface, one might ask why the city does not go ahead and take Gateway, thereby assuring the continued operation of a presumably good and valued entity. Gateway serves as a retirement home for those 62 years of age and over.

But the question of city acceptance of this property is not a simple one. Gateway is looking for one thing, property tax exemption which would permit it to make a financial success of its venture. The city, however, is not in the business of assuming ownership of things for this reason.

The city must have reasons other than this and the basic reason would be the overall public welfare. This is where the City Council will face a difficult choice. In taking Gateway, would the council contribute to the overall public welfare or just to the welfare of Gateway residents?

Obviously, the benefit from city ownership would flow directly to the residents of Gateway and no one else. It is only indirectly that others would benefit from this, much as the community as a whole benefits from many of its institutions both public and private.

City ownership of Gateway would give tax exemption on living quarters for those who reside in Gateway. These are residents who have purchased the right to live there and continue paying monthly fees.

The initial fee to buy your lease of an apartment in Gateway was in the neighborhood of $10,000 and now runs about $17,000. Should the city provide tax exemption for these people who have purchased a home for retirement in Gateway any more than it should provide exemption for the older person who retires in his own home?

Also, there is the question of whether, under its charter, the city has the legal right to own such a place as Gateway. That, however, should be a question that could be quickly and easily answered by the city attorney.

The city, if it accepted Gateway, would want to exempt itself of any future financial liabilities in connection with the operation. If, even with tax exemption, Gateway would not make it financially, the city would not want to be left holding the bag.

This is how the Lincoln General Association now owns or is the sponsor of Gateway. But without ultimate liability, we do not know if ownership can be clearly enough established to provide the tax exemption that Gateway wants.

Also, is Gateway an operation the kind of which the city wants to get involved in? Does Lincoln city government want to start in the retirement home business? Is that a proper governmental function and does the proposal from Gateway include sufficient city government input into the affairs of the operation? . . .

Gateway started just 10 years ago this month, making this a rather unpleasant 10-year anniversary. It is doubtful that the residents of Gateway have anything to worry about, although their financial interests through initial lease purchases are second to the rights of the bond-holders on the mortgage.

This matter of rights of residents is one that the State Legislature would do well to consider. But while such operations as Gateway have failed and even gone through foreclosure in other areas, we know of none where existing residents have lost their leases.

In many other states, it is reported, operations such as Gateway are given tax-exemption status. Perhaps that is what should be done in Nebraska rather than going the route of city ownership.

Whatever is the city's ultimate decision, it is proper that the council has decided to seek more answers in the matter. The city would certainly have to be certain of its possible financial liabilities before it took on this project.

Shifting School Financing

Republicans and Democrats on both the state and national levels have adopted as a political rallying cry the need to relieve the local property tax burden, particularly by changing the method of funding public schools.

President Nixon and leading Republicans have espoused the cause. The Democratic national platform, now in the building stage, contains a draft plank which says, "to reduce the local property tax for all American families, we support equalization of school spending and substantial increases in the federal share of education costs and general revenue sharing."

Both parties in Nebraska support a move away from the property tax financing of public schools and to a reliance on sales and income tax funds, with the Democrats advocating a shift of the total burden to a broadened state tax base.

Indeed, courts have and may continue to order legislatures across the land to draft new formulas for the support of schools if property taxes are now the major source of revenue.

But if this is the wave of the future, the taxpayer should fully understand what he is getting.

The shift to state and federal aid does not mean tax relief, per se. It means a shifting of the tax burden in which the total burden will remain basically the same for the majority of taxpayers and in which some taxpayers will experience relief while some others will be paying more in taxes.

And those who experience relief may find it only a temporary condition. When the state property tax was eliminated and the combination sales and income tax—which is a good tax base—implemented, many thought that property taxes would go down and stay there. It didn't turn out that way. It was a case in which an equitable tax system was sold through false advertising.

If the funding of schools by local property taxes is abandoned, the property tax will go down for awhile, but for those who pay taxes to other local subdivisions of government which rely on the property tax, the bill will slowly creep up again. And add to that the whopping rise in the sales and income tax rates.

Our objection is not to the shifting of the burden of school financing to what is actually an equitable tax system, it is to the manner in which it is being sold. Those who are selling it under the guise of tax relief are guilty of misrepresentation.

Strong Busing Stand

Democratic national platform writers, after frank discussion on the matters, have rejected proposed party positions that would suggest outright approval of sexual deviancy in private and liberalized abortion laws.

The two loaded issues were disposed of not so much because of their merit or lack of same, but because of what the Republicans could do to Democratic candidates who would have to explain such platform planks in the fall campaign.

The platform committee did, however, bite the bullet on the unpopular issue of busing, and in so doing, set the stage for the expected fireworks on the floor of the convention next month.

The committee adopted a strong position saying that busing must be retained as a method "to eliminate legally imposed segregation." Backers of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who also lost in their efforts to knock out the platform call for abolition of capital punishment and for outlawing the sale of "Saturday night special" handguns, were voted down overwhelmingly in their attempt to put the party on record as unalterably opposed to busing to obtain racial balance in the schools.

A minority report to the convention reflecting the views of Wallace backers was authorized by the platform panel, however, thus assuring a continued battle between anti-busing forces and those who deplore the indiscriminate use of busing but see it as one of a number of useful tools in achieving desegregation. The rejected planks on abortion and homosexuality may be debated on the floor as well, but that is doubtful.

What is commendable is the platform committee's insistence that the party take a strong stand in favor of retaining busing when the situation requires it, when it knows that busing is vastly unpopular and the stand will possibly cost the Democrats a significant number of votes.

Good News And Bad

WASHINGTON — The good news is that President Nixon has signed the higher education bill, with its aid for colleges and universities and its mild restraints on pupil busing. The bad news is that he is still threatening to campaign in the fall for a constitutional amendment prohibiting busing.

Signing the bill brought the President down on the right side of what he had termed "a close call" at his news conference last week. Scarcely anyone had disputed the need for massive higher education assistance, either to the hard-pressed insitutions themselves or to students. The anti-busing provisions, added to the bill in the heat of last winter's political eruption of that issue, caused the trouble.

Not that these provisions were too stringent — although some liberals and blacks thought so, and urged the bill's defeat. Nixon thought they were too weak, said so in his news conference, repeated the message in signing the bill and clearly kept the issue open for fanning this fall.

To many others, including most of those who framed the anti-busing provisions, they seem to be the lesser of the available evils — a middle way between the total moratorium on busing proposed by Nixon and to the defeat of the higher education bill if no anti-busing language at all had been added.

Nixon accurately pointed out the crux of the matter at his news conference. He said his own proposal for a moratorium would have prevented the recent order to desegregate Detroit schools by the use of extensive busing; while the legislation he now has signed will mean only that the Detroit order cannot be put into effect until all appeals to higher courts have been exhausted. This may seem to be unnecessary delay to those who regard busing as a legitimate means of desegregation but, from their point of view, surely it is preferable to a congressional mandate to the courts not to order busing at all — a mandate as dubious constitutionally as it would be socially.

Nixon is leaving no doubt about his political intentions. He conceded at his news conference that it was "somewhat doubtful" his own anti-busing legislation would pass Congress, and if not, "then the only recourse left is for a constitutional amendment and I will move in that direction." His top aide on domestic legislation, John Ehrlichman, added that the outlook for the Nixon legislation was not "hopeful" and that, without it, the President "will go to the people" for a constitutional amendment.

No doubt this is scare talk, designed both to egg Congress on and to maintain Nixon in the public eye as an anti-busing champion. He and Ehrlichman know that a constitutional amendment would be difficult to write, harder to get through Congress, a dangerous and heavy-handed remedy for a temporary problem, and could not be enacted for years, thus failing to deal with the immediate crisis the President thinks he sees.

But it is dangerous scare talk. The more the President, who so nearly sets the tone of discussion on public issues, exploits anti-busing sentiment for political profit, the more enflamed that sentiment becomes, and the more it generates pressures on politicians at all levels to respond, however unwisely. Nixon is helping to fan a fire that could consume far more than his political opposition.

Morover, this is a time when the President's influence could be particularly helpful. Just as the perils of busing have been vastly exaggerated, the educational benefits of school desegregation also appear to have been overstated — at least so far as statistics can show. Nixon ought therefore to be leading the country toward some reasonable middle course, not further down the path of fear and division.

Prejudice?

Lincoln, Neb.

The library board has voted not to fund the Northeast Branch Library another year.

Could it be that the board is prejudiced? More minority people use this library than any other library. A large number of black, Indian and Chinese children visit this library regularly.

BERDEEN LAWRENCE

On Gun Controls

Lincoln, Neb.

"Six Die In Shooting Spree," says the headline. The story: A security guard armed with two sawed-off rifles went on a shooting spree in an office building, killing bystanders as they scrambled for cover.

So, six more Americans have died by the gun and I imagine the so-called "liberals" will try to use this in their campaign against private gun-ownership in America. But before readers swallow this line, let them consider a few facts.

New Jersey is an eastern seaboard state and as such is a part of the stronghold of the eastern liberal establishment. New Jersey has had the benefit (?) of strong "gun-control" laws for ages. This shooting is just one more example of how such laws "protect" the citizenry from violent crime. Or should we say that it protects the criminal? He is, after all, utterly assured that none of his victims shall have the means to shoot back at him!

The killer, in this case, was a Pinkerton guard. Though he did not use a handgun in this crime, he very well could have. As a security guard, he was certainly licensed to own and carry a revolver. Of course, I suppose the police will revoke his pistol permit now, if he lives. That and a few days in jail are about the worst thing that is likely to happen to him, though. We don't punish criminals for their crimes, nowadays, and we would certainly not — pardon the word — execute them for a little thing like mass murder!

Ah, no! We have a different kind of justice in this country. We do not punish the murderer for his crimes for, after all, he is but a poor, misunderstood victim of society. Instead, let us punish society! Particularly, let us punish those persons in America who own firearms, whether for self-defense, hunting, or just plain target shooting.

Let us, then, have a socialistic state, where the violent and the lazy might prey upon the decent and the productive at will. Let us have a welfare state, under the principles of Karl Marx. "From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs."

And let us by all means outlaw private firearms ownership in America. Let us use these violent crimes as a wedge and call it justice. Let us punish all Americans who might want a gun because of the misdeeds of a few. We must not punish crime, for that would go against our liberal principles, would it not? So, since we cannot give them the cure they wish, let us give them a panacea". Let us sell them "gun control."

Besides, the sheep will be easier to control . . .

Veteran Benefits

Lincoln, Neb.

How many veterans really are aware of all the veteran benefits available to them?

For example, is it known that a veteran may obtain more than 36 months of GI educational assistance allowance? That any veteran using the GI bill is eligible for tutoring assistance of up to $50 a month for nine months when in danger of failing a course? That VA loans now cover mobile homes? That a veteran may receive free dental work for any dental disability which is shown to have been in existence at time of discharge, provided application is submitted within one year after discharge?

Details of these and many other benefits which a veteran may be unaware of are found in Title 38 — United States Code Veterans Benefits. This Title 38 contains the exact text for all veteran benefit laws ever passed including amendments through Feb. 2, 1971. This (with recent supplements) is available from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington. D. C. 20402. (Price $2).

Also, more immediate detailed information and assistance are available to returning veterans at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Service Office, 217 South 17th Street, in Lincoln. Ask for Clarence Koch or Larry Durfee.

Fugate Case

Bennet, Neb.

In regard to the June 17 letter from Vince Krell of Sioux Fall, South Dakota, about the Fugate case — how anyone as far away as South Dakota, having no personal fear or interest in the case can say that Caril Fugate has paid her debt to society is beyond comprehension.

She lived as an adult and had numerous opportunities to escape from her companion, Charles Starkweather, on that senseless murder spree. I am in no way related to any of the victims or their families but I know the feelings of the Bennet community and they are opposed to her release.

Profits Of War

Blair, Neb.

Is it a truism that if the profits were to be taken out of wars, declared or undeclared, there would be fewer of them and of shorter duration? This is where my vote would go.

Literary millions of Americans make all or part of their living in the U.S. or its dependencies, safe from war or the preparation for war. I am sure that many of these people, even those who make the largest profits from war and defense, would rather they could do as well or less from some other more laudible pursuit.

One often wonders just how many of our flag-waving super-patriots would be so hell-bent for a continuation of the Indochinese debacle if they were called upon to make their living in Vietnam at this time. Yes, how many volunteers would there be from this group or any of the hawks to be placed on salary in areas now the victim of our pin-point bomb barrages, whether in or near military or non-military sections of this American-bomb-ravaged land? Not I! Surely not many of those who would label me a dove on Vietnam.

New Keystone Cops Overplaying The Act

WASHINGTON —Even top presidential aides admit that the attempted bugging of the Democratic National Committee smacks of Keystone Cops. But they see this as their salvation. Who in Peoria or Wichita Falls seriously believes that a handful of Cubans with 10-year-old equipment were tapped by the White House to bug Democratic headquarters?

Who, indeed? Probably not very many people. After all, despite growing "alientation," John P. Public still has a mystic image of far-reaching bureaucratic power and James Bond-like resources available at the push of a White House button. If senior administration officials wanted to tap Democratic phones, they wouldn't have to hire a bunch of Cuban oddballs whose obsolete eavesdropping equipment — would you believe flashlight batteries? — has Capitol-area gumshoes in stitches. Therefore, the argument goes, people will realize that any Nixonites involved must have been low-level types foolishly acting on their own.

Maybe. I don't know. But I do know that this administraton has played Keystone Cops too many times before for this line to be entirely plausible. Over the last few years, there have been several episodes where Keystone Cop bungling has been initially encouraged (or subsequently tolerated) by high officials. On one hand, there are people in the administration who love to play snoop, and there are also a lot of ignorant yesmen who will take a thoughtless remark and run with it.

Perhaps the best example here is the FBI's 1971 investigation of CBS' anti-Nixon reporter, Daniel Schorr, on the flimsy excuse that he was being checked out for an important federal job. Some underling probably heard a flip remark and gave the order.

Further evidence of poor judgment abounds; for example, the selection of G. Harrold Carswell as one of the President's nominees for the Supreme Court. Official investigations failed to turn up a record that was as spotty as an advanced case of measles.

Looking back over the last three years, it is this columnist's opinion that the Nixon administration deserves good marks for restoring conservative balance to the Supreme Court. As for anti-trust enforcement, the administration's record of curbing conglomerate growth stands in laudable contrast with the Democratic pattern of letting more and more conglomerates get bigger and bigger. And while Daniel Schorr got an obvious raw deal, CBS' biased reporting is flagrant enough so that any administration would be seething with anger.

Unfortunately, the continuing Keystone Cop act tends to obscure these achievements and circumstances.

Probably Peoria and Wichita Falls see the bugging episode this way: just some Keystone Cop stuff that doesn't really mean very much. In this sense, the White House has suffered no great damage. But in the longer term, if this sort of bungling keeps recurring, the average American may start piecing together a pattern of startling arrogance or incompetence—or both.

Government 'Secrecy' Used For Own Interest; Pentagon Papers Revealed New Vietnam Info

WASHINGTON — The custodians of government secrets are gnashing their teeth again over our access to the still-secret portions of the Pentagon Papers. These show how Lyndon Johnson tried to bring pressure upon Hanoi to negotiate a Vietnam settlement by orchestrating the air raids against the North.

Sometimes, he stepped up the bombing at crucial stages of the secret negotiations. Repeatedly, Hanoi would halt the talks because of the military pressure.

After his retirement, President Johnson published selective excerpts from the secret papers to demonstrate how right and reasonable he had been. He omitted the portions that made him look wrong and unreasonable.

President Nixon also released sensitive information, strictly for political reasons, about Henry Kissinger's secret Vietnam negotiations. The President used the information to reply to his critics.

The power to classify information must be recognized for what it is. It is nothing less than the absolute authority of the government to make a state secret of whatever it wishes. This divine right to classify documents has been abused to a degree beyond toleration.

Not only does the government sweep its bungles and blunders, its errors and embarrassments under the secrecy labels. But our entire foreign policy and defense posture remains secret except for what the federal establishment thinks is in its own interest to make public.

The tragic, bitter lessons of Vietnam have shown the fateful consequences of allowing any president to exercise power in splendid isolation behind the double walls of executive privilege and official secrecy.

We will continue, therefore, to publish information that the government seeks to hide from the public by classifying.

The unpublished Pentagon Papers, for example, shed new light on the Soviet role in the Vietnam negotiations. The Kremlin, after showing no interest in settling the war, suddenly adopted a different attitude in 1967. Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin made the new attitude known during a London visit.

"The British were first startled, then delighted to find Kosygin eager to play an active role as intermediary between the U.S. and Hanoi . . .," states the papers. "There was definitely a sharp change from previous Soviet reluctance to play the middleman . . .

"What produced this change in Soviet attitudes? Were they acting on DRV (North Vietnamese) behest? Or were they now willing to put pressure on Hanoi in pursuit of interest of their own?

"Only a little light is shed on these questions by the materials relating to Kosygin's stay in London. He was apparently willing to transmit proposals for DRV consideration more or less uncritically. While he argued the general merits of the DRV's side of the war, he did not try to bargain or alter specifics of the proposals transmitted to him . . .

"Entirely apart from the sequence in which these steps would be taken, their long term result for the communists would be extremely adverse militarily. Yet on February 13, he was overheard (by telephone intercept) to tell Brezhnev (the Communist party chief) of 'a great possibility of achieving the aim, if the Vietnamese will understand the present situation that we have passed to them; and they will have to decide . . .'

"In a retrospective discussion with Lewellyn Thompson (then the U.S. ambassador) in Moscow, Kosygin expressed a jaundiced view of the role of mediators, saying they either complicated the problem or pretended they were doing something when in fact they were not.

"He had stepped into this uncomfortable spot in London because 'the Vietnamese had for the first time stated they were ready to negotiate if the bombings were stopped unconditionally; this was the first time they had done so . . .'

"How much the Russians had hoped in fact to accomplish during Kosygin's London trip is impossible to know. They apparently harbored few expectations after his return. Kosygin complained to Thompson about the 'ultimatum' implied in the final proposal he transmitted to Hanoi from London, saying that he knew it was hopeless the minute he read it . . ."

This incident illustrates how little influence the Kremlin had over the North Vietnamese. It was the beginning, however, of an increased Soviet interest in ending the Vietnam War.

Operation Can Be Free For Poor:

Clinic Gives Advice On Vasectomies

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

"Anyone who understands vasectomy and wants it should be able to have it."

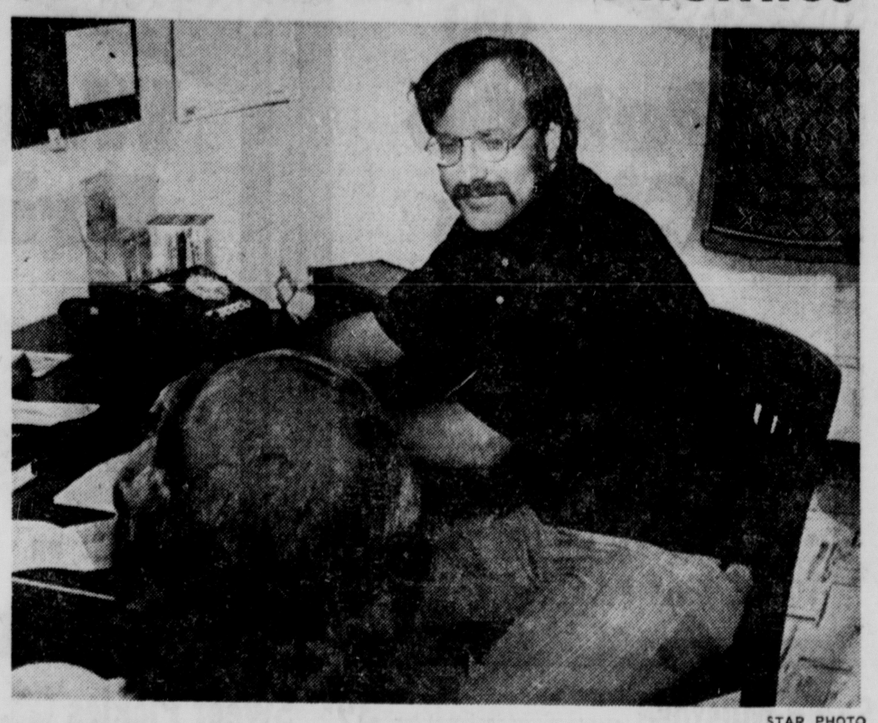
That's the attitude of Lincoln Family Planning Center staff member Greg Farstrup, a birth control counseler who specializes in counseling couples on the increasingly popular male sterilization technique.

"Whether a person has no child or lots of children," says Farstrup, his decision to undergo a vasectomy "should be respected."

Nineteen vasectomies have been performed at the Family Planning Center since last October, when the federally funded facility added vasectomy clinics to its schedule of birth control services.

Farstrup, a Peace Corps veteran and University of Nebraska graduate, joined the staff of the center about a year ago.

He has since counseled more than 150 males on birth control techniques and has put together a roster of community physicians who will perform the simple operation.



STAR PHOTO

Visits With Many

He said he has visited with many others in his talks in the community or by phone, explaining the technique as a simple, permanent and relatively inexpensive birth control technique which can be performed in a physician's office in a matter of 15 to 30 minutes.

For persons who fall within the center's income guidelines, the center's own volunteer physicians will perform the operation free.

For others, Farstrup can suggest several Lincoln doctors who will do it at costs ranging from $75 to $250.

"One (Lincoln) doctor will do it for childless couples," said Farstrup, noting others have varying requirements based on age and number of children the man has already fathered.

Vasectomy involves, under local anesthesia, the cutting of the cords which carry sperm to the seminal fluid.

'Simplest'

Farstrup said he recommends it as the simplest and most dependable of the birth control techniques available, but he said he emphasizes that it must be considered a permanent operation.

For couples who may want to have children in the future, Farstrup recommends other techniques, such as the pill or IUDs, or a combination of devices.

He notes that a combination of spermicidal foam, condoms and the rhythm method, all correctly used, proves "very effective."

But he also said ignorance about such devices, or leaving them on the shelf during intercourse, can often be blamed for unwanted pregnancies.

The ignorance Farstrup encounters, from young and old people alike, indicates the "need for education on sex and sexuality in high schools and colleges is unmet," he says.

A native Nebraskan who attended high school in Exeter, Farstrup said he became interested in family planning during a stint in the Peace Corps in Ceylon.

His experiences there and in other parts of Asia he visited convinced him, Farstrup explained, that America's somewhat small population is having a large effect on the world because of its consumer demands.

He wants to go back overseas to work in family planning eventually, but he said he also wants to have worked here first.

He said he plans eventually to undergo the vasectomy operation himself, perhaps after the birth of the Farstrups first child later this summer.

Responsibility for family planning is a "couple's thing" which generally is handed over to women by their male sexual partners, said Farstrup.

But he said he believes "men have a responsibility, too."

Court Rejects California Liquor Law Challenge

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court rejected a challenge that California liquor laws prohibiting dancers and waitresses from soliciting drinks from customers discriminate against women.

The case was brought to the high court by Westent Inc., operator of a topless bar in San Francisco, whose "on-sale license" was revoked on Nov. 11, 1971, on grounds it violated restrictions on "B-girl" activities.

Testimony showed that patrons of the place, called the Mocambo, had been asked by B-girls to buy drinks for other girl employes. Westent argued that the law discriminates against women.

Stock In Irrevocable Trust Not Taxable At Death When Owner Controlled Voting

Washington (AP) — Stock transferred to an irrevocable trust is not taxable at death when the owner controlled the power to vote the stock during his lifetime, the Supreme Court ruled 6 to 3.

The decision, delivered by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., went against the Internal Revenue Service in a case involving the estate of Milliken C. Byrum of Orient, Ohio.

The government had argued that this would open a substantial loophole in the estate tax law.

The decision was labeled "wrong in all substantial respects" by the three dissenters, Justices Byron R. White, William J. Brennan Jr. and Harry A. Blackmun.

Byrum owned controlling stock in three corporations. In 1958 he created an irrevocable trust for the benefit of his children, and from time to time, transferred shares in the corporations to the trust.

He retained for his lifetime the power to vote the stock, none of which was listed on an exchange, and the power to prevent the trustee from selling any assets.

The government argued that if the stock is not taxable at death, there would be substantial savings to majority corporate owners who insist on retaining lifetime control of their corporations.

If stock transferred to an irrevocable trust is not taxable as part of an estate the owner would have to pay only the lower gift tax due on transferring the stock to the trust.

The Byrum estate was granted a refund of $13,202 plus six per cent from 1967, when the challenged tax was paid.

Powell said Byrum's retention of voting control did not mean he maintained use of the transferred propoerty within the meaning of federal tax law.

Alliance Migrant Program Said Pawn In Larger Game

By United Press International

State Education Commissioner Cecil Stanley said Tuesday protests against the Alliance education program for children of migrant workers were part of a "much larger game."

Stanley said the program rolled along for four years at Alliance without a single complaint.

Then this year, a series of charges, including student beatings and humiliation, were levied by Chicago spokesmen. They also contended the program did not fit the needs of the students.

"I personally feel that the current migrant program is but a pawn in a much larger game, Stanley said.

His conclusion resulted from an investigation of the Alliance program conducted by the U.S. Office of Education and State officials. The probe was requested by the commissioner as a result of the charges.

It will be some time before the official results of the visit of Vidal Rivera, head of the federal agency's migrant education program division in Washington, are released Stanley said.

But, he said, after Rivera's two-day visit to Alliance last week, he did make some preliminary observations.

Mr. Rivera verbally indicated to State Department of Education officials in attendance during the review that the program conducted in Alliance was meeting the law and intent of Congress and was a most worthy program," Stanley said.

Accompanying the federal official last Wednesday and Thursday were Jerry Kromberg, representing the governor's office, and Mrs. Racheal Rodriguez, representing the Nebraska Commission.

In addition to reviewing the program, the officials met with migrant families and conducted an evening meeting attended by 150 persons, the commissioner said.

Stanley said the purpose of the meeting was to solicit criticism of the program and suggestions on improvements.

The major suggestion coming out of the meeting, he said, was a request to extend the program beyond the planned termination date of July 7 because some families would be remaining in the area.

"The department of education is exploring this request and will extend the length of the program if sufficient numbers of children wilh remain in the area after July 7," Stanley said.

Another major suggestion made, he said, was providing more bilingual teachers for the program.

Welfare Checks To Be Mailed Early

State Welfare Director Lawrence Graham announced Tuesday the July welfare checks will be mailed on the first of the month.

Normally, the director said, checks are mailed on the fifth working day of each month. But, due to the July 4 holiday, that would mean a July 10 mailing.

The early mailing, Graham said, was the result of close cooperation and coordination between the State Treasurer's Office, the Department of Administrative Services and the Welfare Department.

In the future, the director added, welfare checks would be mailed as early as possible in the month. Exact dates, however, he said, have not yet been determined.

He said an announcement of the mailing schedule would be made at a later date.

3 Recommended For Commutation

By United Press International

The State Parole Board decided Tuesday to recommend three men serving life sentences be considered for commutation to a specific number of years for parole purposes.

The recommendation was made by the parole unit to the State Pardon Board. The Pardon Board members will meet later to decide the commutation questions.

Recommended to the board were:

—Dennis O'Kelly, 31, Lincoln. He is serving a life term on a Lancaster County District Court second degree murder conviction and began serving in 1962.

Board Chairman John Greenholtz said the unit did not complete its hearings on parole requests Tuesday and will continue on Wednesday. He also said two others serving life sentences will be considered for a commutation recommendation.

Those who were granted paroles included, giving home of record, crime convicted of county where convicted, term and date of sentence beginning:

Flattened Cans Shipped

Northwestern Metal Co. have loaded a boxcar full of flattened cans collected by Citizens for Environmental Improvement. The cans will be shipped to a recycling center in Utah.

Russell Miller, of the CEI, said according to a spokesman of the American Can Company in St. Louis, there are approximately 25,000 cans in a ton, but the amount will vary depending on the type of can.

Beverage cans with aluminum tops weight 18,000 a ton. With the combination of cans collected, Miller said he is using the figure of 20,000 cans a ton.

Miller added that, "Northwestern Metal is the only firm in Lincoln that is willing to handle the cans. None of the other firms were even willing to help.

"Northwestern has bent over backwards to help," he said. "Whenever we asked, they would bring over an empty bin and take the full bin at no charge. In addition they would pay us for the cans."

The founder of Houses of Hope of Nebraska, Ralph Fox, was named to the board of directors of the Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Programs during the association's annual meeting in Florida.

Hospital Meet Slated

The regular monthly meeting of the Lincoln General Hospital Board of Trustees has been set for 8 a.m. Wednesday in the hospital board room.

'Tony' Boyle Fined $130,000, Sentenced To 5-Year Term

Washington (UPI) — Former President W. A. "Tony" Boyle of the United Mine Workers was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $130,000 Tuesday for illegally diverting union funds to political campaigns.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey denied a defense request that Boyle be permitted to remain free pending appeal to a higher court. The 70-year-old labor leader, his face flushed, was ordered jailed immediately.

But he was released late Tuesday after about six hours behind bars when Richey approved surety bonds to cover the $130,000 fine.

Boyle, convicted by a federal court jury earlier this month, was charged with unlawfully diverting $49,250 in UMW funds to political campaigns, including $30,000 to the 1968 presidential candidacy of Hubert H. Humphrey.

Other contributions went to Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, Rep. John Saylor, R-Pa., former Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and former Rep. Arnold Olsen, D-Mont.

Under federal law, it is illegal for unions to contribute to political campaigns unless the money is donated voluntarily by their members specifically for a candidate's election bid.

Boyle was convicted of funneling money from the UMW treasury through the union's political arm, Labor's Nonpartisan League, to the bank accounts of the candidates.

Specifically, Boyle received two concurrent five-year sentences plus two years' probation following his release. As a condition for probation, however, Richey said the protege of the late UMW President John L. Lewis must pay back to the union the full $49,250 which was diverted to political campaigns.

Stock Split Planned For Howard Johnson's

New York (AP) — The board of directors of Howard Johnson Co. announced plans for a 2-for-1 stock split effective Aug. 7 for stockholders of record July 10.

The board also declared a quarterly dividend of 6 cents a share and said the dividend for the split stock will be 4 cents a share.

Poll: Nixon's Moscow Trip, Pacts Are Widely Supported

By LOUIS HARRIS

Louis Harris

Summit Trip Approved

By a massive 82-11% the American people viewed with approval President Nixon's summit trip to the Soviet Union, and by an almost identical 80-12% margin, the public gives its stamp of approval on the agreement to limit the manufacture of nuclear defensive (ABM) missiles.

In fact, all of the agreements reached at the summit meetings in Moscow receive at least 80% or better endorsement from the American people in a special Harris Survey among 1,401 households conducted June 7-12:

—By 81½%, the public approves the U.S.-Russian agreement to cooperate closely in future space programs.

—By 82-9%, a majority of the people think well of the two countries setting up a joint commission to open up trade between the two countries.

—By 84-7%, a majority of the public approve the U.S.-USSR pact pledging to avoid attacks on each other's naval vessels.

—By an even higher 90-5%, public approval is given to the agreement to undertake joint health and medical research projects.

—Finally, by 92-4%, the people approve of the pledge of both countries to work together to try to control air and water pollution.

As occurred in the wake of President Nixon's earlier visit to Peking, the Moscow summit journey appears to be paying handsome political dividends for Nixon. He increased his lead over his prospective opponents for the White House from two to 12 points as a direct result of his achievements in Russia. Nixon is proving up to now that the time-honored adage that foreign policy does not affect elections probably was patent nonsense all along.

When questioned in depth about the implications of the Nixon Russian trip on future developments in the world, the people expressed a fair degree of caution. A substantial 58-23% majority said that they agree "a whole new period of more peaceful relations between the U.S. and Russia has been opened up."

However, the public draws a sharp distinction between improving U.S.-Russian relations and any broad and sweeping conclusion that the course of world affairs will change overnight. For example, by a decisive 65-17%, a sizable majority does not think that "the Cold War is probably over," as a result of the Moscow accords. By the same token, by 50-32%, a majority also are dubious of the claim that "the likelihood of other wars in the future has been diminished." And by 51-31%, a majority also does not feel that "we are closer to a settlement in Vietnam" as a result of the summit. Nor, by 47-32%, does a plurality of the American people believe "the world is a more peaceful place to live in."

What the public demonstrates in its underlying attitudes about the summit is a sense of deep caution not to expect too much progress in easing East-West tensions in one fell swoop. Rather, the public sees the Moscow summit as a historic breakthrough, but merely a first promising step on a long road toward easing tensions.

The appetite for further agreements with the Russians and the Chinese was evident in the results of another question which asked the public how dangerous it feels it is to make agreements with Communist nations. By a decisive 59-29%, a majority of the people reject the notion that "it is dangerous to make agreements with Communist countries."

Apart from the jump in the lead he holds over his prospective Democratic opponents, President Nixon's job rating on a whole host of foreign policy dimensions also rose dramatically as a result of his trip. For example, Nixon's reputation for "working for peace in the world" has gone to 64-35% positive, up from 53-44% positive in May. In handling relations with the Russians, the President's marks soared to 67-28% positive, compared with no better than 50-40% in May.

There is little doubt that both the trip and the agreements reached were not only non-controversial with the public, but have been warmly applauded by the American people since the President's return. Some politicians might view the journey with cynicism, citing its timing to help in a Presidential election year. But even at that, these results rather conclusively show that such journeys to bring peace closer are good politics, all the same.

With demise of the old Teepee room at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel, I am wondering what happened to the fantastic pictures of American Indians that used to hang there. Hope they were not destroyed. —W.W., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Certainly not destroyed, says a hotel official. They have been relocated in various places in the hotel since redecorating.

Explain the difference between a school permit for driving and a learner's permit. —Fifteener, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Persons between 14 and 16 years of age, except within Metropolitan, Primary and First Class cities, may be issued a limited permit to drive a motor vehicle to and from school via the nearest roadway from place of residence. If such a person lives a distance of one and a half miles or more from school, the permit shall only be used for transporting the minor to attend school, except that the holder of the permit may drive under the supervision of their parent or guardian. A school permit is issued after an examiner is satisfied the minor can successfully operate a motor vehicle.

A person who has attained the age of 15 years or more may obtain a learner's permit which shall be valid for a period of one year. The person may operate a motor vehicle over the highways if accompanied by a Nebraska licensed operator who is at least 21 years of age ond actually occupying the seat beside the driver.

If a driver's license has been revoked for a year in Nebraska because of points for speeding, is it possible to obtain a license in Colorado for driving in that state before the suspension period is over? —M.K., Crete

ACTION LINE: According to the State Motor Vehicle Department, Colorado and Nebraska have a reciprocal agreement that a motorist losing a license due to drunk driving in one state cannot get a license in the other state. However, Colorado does not recognize Nebraska's point system, it would be up to the Colorado Motor Vehicle Department to decide whether to issue a license to a driver who had lost a license in Nebraska due to points. This type agreement involves also the neighboring states of Iowa and Kansas.

But, the department adds, South Dakota is not in the agreement. The South Dakota Motor Vehicle Department would have to decide whether to issue a license to a driver who had had his Nebraska license revoked.

What is the law regarding issuing a ticket for going through a red light at an intersection when I thought I was going through a caution light? —D.C., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: State statute and city ordinance state you can't violate an automatic signal. A Lincoln police officer says that citations are issued when a motorist violates a red traffic signal. The rule of thumb, says the officer, is: if the motorist is back of the crosswalk when the red light comes on, then a citation is issued for running a red light. If the motorist enters the intersection on a caution light and is beyond the crosswalk when the red light goes on, no citation.

Drive carefully.

Maryland Flood Ends Couple's Wedding Plans

Baltimore, Md. (AP) — They buried Carroll Greninger Tuesday, just 11 days before he was to marry his high school sweetheart. Her body hasn't been found yet.

Greninger, 20, and his 19-year-old fiancee, Gail Stout, were swept into the raging Patapsco River early last Thursday. They were last seen clutching a log in a desperate effort to stay alive.

"It's been living hell and I just can't put into words how I feel," Greninger's father said Tuesday.

Young Greninger was one of the 21 known dead in Maryland after the floods that followed Tropical Storm Agnes.

Portugal Prepares To Join The Modern World

The New York Times

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
London Times Dispatch

London — Physically, Portugal turns her back on Europe. Economically, however, she is being drawn more and more into the orbit of European change, with its trend towards the large economic blocks and political interchanges.

When Dr. Marcello Caetano, the premier, took office in 1968 he gathered around him a team of younger men with intensive technological training, go-ahead business ideas and an international outlook. Politically, however, he has disappointed the more liberal elements of the country. Yet his leadership has brought a tremendous upsurge of endeavor.

He started by waging war against the country's old-fashioned bureaucracy — including, education, health, economy, labor and industry.

Old friendships and alliances such as those with Brazil, Britain and Spain have been consolidated and new diplomatic links have been forged with other countries.

Ambitious Plans

Ambitious plans are in the air: huge industrial undertakings, road-building, port expansion and reorganization, bigger and better railways and a new super airport to accommodate modern traffic. Plans for tourism may revolutionize large stretches of the countryside.

Caetano has promoted the reform of the nation's political constitution, a law on industrial development, reform of education, a press law and statute for journalists and a new law for the overseas territories which allows more local autonomy. He denies that the latter borders on self-determination, which some sectors of the country want. His press law has not been well received because it maintains censorship.

He has changed the name of the political police and to some extent curtailed their power.

Portugal is run on a corporative system. Employer and worker collaborate in settling labor disputes and in making contracts that fix wages and fringe benefits. They also coordinate activities of the guilds, or gremios, which group the employers of each category of industry, and the trade unions, or sindicatos, which group the workers.

Wages Pushed Up

Since Caetano came into office the sindicatos seem to be growing in power, and wages are being pushed up — with the inevitable repercussion on the cost of living.

The base of the pyramid of planned reforms would appear to be education.

Preparing the pupil for practical modern life will replace old-fashioned educational methods. The school-leaving age has been raised to 14.

Professional orientation will begin in the last year of secondary school education. After that, commercial, industrial and professional training will be available according to the student's aptitute. More commercial and technical training colleges are being built.

Modern Farming

Farming will also be based on education in the future, as traditional farming methods are rapidly replaced by modern technology.

The most important aim of Portugal's industrial revolution, however, is to prepare the country to enter the competitive export field.

"Export or die" is the current slogan, and industry is being reorganized and diversified with this in view.

Caetano knows that first he has to change the timidity of the Portuguese exporter, who has in the past been discouraged by circumstance. He also has to provide the country, whose home market is small, with the right things to export.

Industries Expanded

These problems are being energetically tackled. Among the country's major fields of expansion is that of the manufacturing industries. They cover an ever wider field, from plastics to the canning of fruit and vegetables, from electrical equipment to knitwear.

Among the more ambitious schemes are the "Big Five" long-term projects. These are the sea port, oil terminal, refinery and industrial complex at Sines south of Lisbon; the Setenave port and shipyard at Setubal nearby; expansion of the northern Matosinhos oil refinery; extension of the steel industry (for which Britain has provided both equipment and credits); and boosting of the already flourishing petrochemical industry.

Side by side with these grandiose plans for national expansion go real problems for Caetano and his ministers. To begin with there is the rising cost of living which has shot up as high as 11% in a year.

Behind this rise there are several factors. One is the influx of money from emigrant workers which has revolutionized spending, particularly in the provincial and rural areas. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers serving overseas raise the economy because they are forced by circumstances to save their salaries until they get home. The booming tourist industry also helps to push up prices, even though it brings rewards to national income.

Can't Join EEC

Second, the future is clouded by the possible demise of EFTA, the European Free Trade Association, to which Portugal belongs. Portugal's economic and political status rules out the possibility of joining the European Economic Community as a full member.

There are also problems connected with the overseas provinces, although economic and social expansion is well under way there.

Finally, there are two countries to which Portugal is turning with increased attention. One is Brazil, her ancient colony, and the other is Spain, her ancient master.

Economically relations are unfavorable with Brazil, because its exports of coffee and sugar rival those of Portugal's African territories. But the countries have a long-standing pact of friendship and consultation, and recent events may be interpreted as a goodwill gesture of a parent race flattering its now independent offspring.

Portugal is linked with Spain by many ties, including mutual trade prospects and industrial venture. Although her fate with the E.E.C. is in the balance, Portugal still has other prospects of cooperation open to her.

Zaire Dedicated To Saving 'A Last Human Refuge'

The New York Times

By MARVINE HOWE

Kinshasa, Zaire — "We cannot show our visitors old cathedrals or ancient monuments, but we have no complexes. Our monuments, our cathedrals are our rivers, forests, insects, animals, lakes, volcanoes, mountains and plains."

This dedication to nature was made recently by Gen. Mobutu Sese Seko, president of Zaire and the African leader who has shown the most concern for the defense of the environment.

The protection of Zaire's national estate has become an integral part of President Mobutu's development program.

He has announced plans to set aside as much as 15% of the country's territory as natural reserves. At present the Zaire authorities protect 18,512,500 acres of land, or 3.17% of the country.

Want Human Refuge

"We want there to exist a last human refuge, a natural nature in Zaire, when the scientists will have transformed the world into an artificial environment," President Mobutu declared in May at a congress of the nation's single political party.

"We don't want those degrading industries whose waste kills the fish of our rivers depriving man of the pleasure of fishing and drinking water," he said.

The National Institute for the Conservation of Nature recently published for the first time a map of Zaire's national park reserves.

The map uses nomenclature which has been completely Africanized — in accordance with the current decolonization campaign — except for Lake Albert and Lake Edouard, bordering on Uganda.

The Belgian kings who ruled this country until independence in 1960 were interested in preserving the national resources and created the Institute of National Parks of the Congo as early as 1925. Albert National Park was established the same year at Lake Edouard. Garamba National Park was set up in the Northeast in 1938 and Upenba National Park the following year in the Southeast.

President Mobutu added four national parks to the country in 1970: the vast Salonga in the West Central virgin forest, Maiko and Kahuzi-Biega in the central east and Kundelungu in the southeast.

Three additional reserves are under study, according to Mokwa Vanckang Izmtsho, director of the National Institute for the Conservation of Nature, which replaced the old Belgian institute. These are to be located in the southwest between Boma and Matadi, east of Kinshasa in the area between Banbundu and Kenge and in the far north around Ango.

Mokwa said in an interview that his institute had three basic aims: to protect the integral natural reserves without introducing new fauna as is done in Kenya, to favor scientific research in the reserves and to promote tourism.

Virunga National Park, which starts at Lake Kivu and extends past Lake Edouard, is the best known of the reserves and well prepared for visitors. It offers a wide variety of natural environment: the snow-capped heights of the Ruwenzori Mountains, active and extinct volcanoes, waterfalls and forest-rimmed lakes. The Paru is rich in hippos — more than 22,000 — plus lions, elephants, gorillas, buffalo and antelope.

Elephants Mix

In the fishing village of Vitshumbi on Lake Edouard, elephants mix with the villagers, the pelicans and Maribu storks. Fishing is permitted, and Lake Edouard is said to be the richest lake in Central Africa in underwater fauna. The small park of Kahuzi-Biega near Bukavu was designed to protect the gorillas and the exceptional mountain vegetation.

Garamba Park is one of the last places in the world where the white rhinoceros exists in its original habitat.

This park was devastated during the rebellions and the rhinos dropped to 50 in 1968. But according to last year's count, there were 250. There are also giraffes and huge colonies of elephants.

Salonga and Maiko Parks have not yet been opened to the public. Scientists have shown interest in Salonga, one of the largest reserves of virgin forest in the world, and are studying the dwarf chimpanzee there. Maiko's equatorial forest is the home of gorillas, peacocks and the strange zebra-like okapi.

Governors OK Energy Study

Bismarck, N.D. (AP) — Fearful that the predicted energy crisis will lead to wholesale mining of high-sulfur coal from the Midwest and subsequent air polllution, governors of Midwest states have decided to have state experts study the energy environmental question.

Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa told the 15-state Midwest Governors Conference that, "If we in the Midwest can work together and solve the problem of extracting the sulfur from the coal that is mined in an environmentally acceptable way, within a reasonable cost, we will have achieved a worthy goal."

The governors accepted Ray's invitation to convene a conference in Iowa of state experts to discuss the energy-environmental question.

Ray told the annual meeting of Midwest governors that coal may have to supply part of the answer to the expected energy shortage, since nuclear plants will be able to meet only the basic electrical needs of the nation.

The Iowa governor pointed out that 45% of the nation's coal reserves are in the 15-state Midwest region, but said much of it is high-sulfur coal that causes air contamination when burned.

Although not in attendance, Gov. Wendell Ford of Kentucky advised other governors to act quickly or resign themselves to merely carrying out federal policy in the energy field.

Ford, who underwent surgery Monday at Houston, Tex., submitted a prepared statement through an aide saying that removal of sulfur from coal is the critical question if coal is to be used for meeting electrical energy demands.

"If answers are not found, we soon will be faced with a critical decision," Ford said. "Do we take a vast amount of the nation's coal fields out of production, or do we continue pollution of the air?"

Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas said he disagrees both with "doomsday environmentalists," who forecast crisis unless electrical use is curtailed, and those who claim that technology can solve the problem.

"The future of our nation and mankind depends upon a realistic path somewhere between those two extremes," Docking told the other governors.

The 12 governors attending the three-day meeting, their wives and aides attended an outdoor buffalo barbecue Monday night at Camp Lincoln, now a state park, but once the Army post where Gen. George Custer's troops left for their last stand.

The conference's member states are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Demos Seek Stand Against Quota Lifting

Bismarck, N.D. (AP) — Two Democrats asked the Midwest Governors Conference Tuesday to take a stand against the lifting of meat import restrictions by President Nixon.

"I don't want to get into a partisan situtation, but I think it is important that we take a stand," said Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska.

Exon and Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma first raised the issue. Both are Democrats and both represent major livestock states.

Hall said he was preparing a resolution for action. But Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa, a Republican presiding over Tuesday's session, suggested it be postponed to Wednesday.

Ray did not flatly oppose a resolution on meat imports but appeared to be trying to steer the language toward a nonpartisan approach.

Hall and Gov. Richard Ogilvie of Illinois were named to prepare the language of the resolution. Ogilvie is a Republican.

Exon said the President's action Monday was taken without consulting any farm state governors.

HARVEST PANORAMA ABOUT TO BEGIN

A sample of the harvest panorama which will sweep across Nebraska this week was some early cutting by Rodney Hellbusch of near Reynolds in southwestern Jefferson County. His first swaths through a field of Scout 66 wheat showed a surprising moisture content of only 11.5%. Ira Beachler, manager of the Farmers Union Co-Op Elevator at Reynolds, said it appears area yields will average about 35 to 40 bushels per acre, "down about 10 from last year." (Star Staff Photo)

King Lake's Dike Proposal Okayed

Omaha (AP) — Residents of King Lake came back to the Douglas County Board Tuesday with a new plan for a ring dike around the community. This time the board approved it.

"This is what we've been waiting for," said Emil Rabe, chairman of the King Lake Improvement Committee. "It's a shot in the arm for all of us."

A committee led by Rabe cut from $170,000 to about $50,000 the estimated amount the county would have to pay for the dike project, which would be largely federally funded. The board last fall had rejected the original proposal as too costly in relation to the few it would benefit.

The community on the Elkhorn River has about 470 residents.

The county cost was trimmed by reducing the area to be compassed by the proposed dike and by getting property owners to donate or sell at low prices land on which the dike could be built.

Commissioner William Green said county backing is contingent on the outcome of a suit challenging the constitutionality of the state natural resource districts law.

If the law is upheld, he said, the district which would be composed of Washington, Douglas and Sarpy counties, would have the responsibility.

Statements On Parity Draw Strong Criticism

Alliance (UPI) — Recent statements by Don Paarlberg, economics director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, on the use of parity as a measuring device of farm economy were attacked at a meeting of the Nebraska Wheatgrowers Association.

"When Paarlberg tried to shame, deter and ridicule the farm press into not using the term parity on farm-related issues he has done most citizens a great injustice," Vic Haas, association president, said in reference to recent news stories on a meeting between farm reporters and Paarlberg.

"Paarlberg, while chatting with representatives of the farm press, tried to make them think that when they report on parity-related issues they are usually writing stories that are 20 years out of date," Haas said. "But getting rid of the only measuring yardstick that is fair to both the consumers and farmers would be like getting rid of the Cost of Living Index."

Haas noted parity, which represents farm return for goods produced cmpared with the return in the economic sector, presently stands at about 70%.

"The United States farmers will never receive parity income until they receive parity prices," he said.

Referring to a statement which he said Paarlberg made about farmers solving income problems by producing nonfarm income, Haas asked "Why should farmers be singled out as the ones expected to moonlight in order to enjoy the same living standards as nonfarmers?"

Iowa Beef Processors Investigated

New York (AP) — Manhattan Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan said Tuesday night his office has under way an extensive investigation of price-fixing in the meat industry.

Hogan confirmed a report that among the meat packers under scrutiny was Iowa Beef Processors of Dakota City, Neb., one of the nations leading meat producers.

He saida number of Iowa Beef officials had been interviewed by his investigators, but declined to say how many or who they were.

The investigation was sought to identify irregularities in pricing, union-management relations and other areas of the meat industry, Hogan said. It has also tried to find what if any role organized crime has assumed among meat packers, he said.

U.S. Atty. Whitney North Seymour Jr. declined to say whether his office has conducted a similar probe.

Hogan said his investigation had been under way for sometime but said he was unable to say when it would be completed or whether material would be submitted to a grand jury for possible indictments.

The district attorney would identify no other firms involved in the investigation.

Rattlesnake Adds To Family's Vacation Grief

Plainview (AP) —Triple trouble plagued the Jack Lipscomb family from Manassas, Va., here as state patrolmen and the Air National Guard pitched in to help in the latest crisis.

Joy Lipscomb, 4, one of five children of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lipscomb, was bitten by a rattlesnake while vacationing here Monday evening.

State patrolmen worked through the night to relay snake-bite serum from six cities to the Plainview hospital where she is seriously ill.

An Air National Guard plane flew from Sioux City, Iowa, to Kansas City to pick up more serum Tuesday, and then took it to Plainview.

The snake bite was the third major problem for the family since they headed west on vacation.

Daughter Julie, 12, crashed through a motel window at Davenport, Iowa, and suffered cuts requiring 54 stitches, her grandfather, G. C. Millnitz of Plainview, reported.

And, he said, the family has learned that floodwaters entered their home in Virginia.

Millnitz said the Lipscombs, visiting here, decidede to spend a few days at a cabin he owns along the Missouri River near Verdel, about 45 miles away.

He said he and Lipscomb were returning from fishing about 9:15 p.m. Monday when they heard "hollering" on the shore and found Joy has been bitten by a rattlesnake.

"She was about 10 steps ahead of her mother, who thought she heard the snake and saw it leap through the air and strike," Millnitz said.

The family put Joy in the car and raced for the nearest physician, in Verdigre.

He was at the hospital in Creighton, so they drove there.

No snake-bite serum was available, so the doctor advised them to drive to the Plainview Hospital, Millnitz said.

Dr. R. E. Kopp of Plainview began trying to locate the serum, and the Nebraska State Patrol was asked to help.

The patrol headquarters at Norfolk said calls went out to medical centers and 10 troopers began relaying the serum to Plainview.

They obtained a total of 17 bottles at Sioux City, Norfolk, Lincoln, Beatrice and Ainsworth, the patrol said, with troopers on the road between 11 p.m. and 6:45 a.m.

Lipscomb and Millnitz both said Joy showed some progress after receiving the serum, but the situation will be "touch and go" for 72 hours.

Dr. Kopp said about mid-day that Joy was improving and "we hope the medicine works."

He said a large amount of serum was needed because a snake bite is three or four times as serious with a child as with an adult. The poison can affect both the nervous system and blood-circulation system, he said. Kidney failure, convulsions, shock and paralysis can result, he said. The serum is administered hourly, he said.

The serum not used for Joy will be redistributed around Nebraska since the case has nearly exhausted the state supply, he said.

Lipscomb is a Navy flier, his wife is from Plainview and some of the children were born here, Millnitz said.

Pig Crop Down 7% From Last Year

Nebraska's pig crop during the three months ending in May fell 7% short of the same quarter last year, the State-Federal division of Agricultural Statistics reported Tuesday. Pigs saved totaled 1,728,000, compared with 1,852,000 last year. As of June 1, Nebraska farmers indicated they intend to farrow 157,000 sows in the June-August quarter, or 5% less than last year. For the September-November quarter, farrowing intentions also are down 5% from last year. As of June 1 Nebraska's hog and pig population totaled 3.3 million, down 8% from the same date last year.

78 Fireworks Injuries In State Last Year

Auburn (AP) — A spokesman for insurance agents noted Tuesday that mis-use of fireworks caused 78 injuries in Nebraska last year, and urged efforts to reduce the toll during this year's July 4 celebration. Roy Steinheider of Auburn, president of the Nebraska Association of Mutual Insurance Agents, said the 78 injuries last year compared to 58 in 1970. Twenty-two fires were blamed on fireworks during the two-year span.

Stromsburg Centennial Pageant Rescheduled

Stromsburg (AP) — Never let it be said the Stromsburg Centennial Committee didn't try their darndest. The centennial pageant, entitled "Our Town," was rained out two consecutive nights during the town's Centennial-Swedish Festival, June 17-18. It seemed the cancellations were quite unpopular and many of the Stromsburg residents wanted to see the home-written home-produced and home-acted pageant. The committee rescheduled the pageant for June 30 at 9:30 p.m., with one reservation. If it rains again, the pageant is all washed up.

Hay Springs Youth Takes Top Honors

Purdum — George Marcy of Hay Springs racked up a total score of 233 points for first place junior division individual judging honors at the Junior Angus Field Day held at the S and W Ranch northwest of here. Marcy won a registered Angus heifer calf and a silver tray for his judging skills in placing over 77 other junior judges entered. Pressing Marcy for top honors was Clark Nelson of Ceresco with a 232 score. In team competition, a Blaine County 4-H team and an FFA team from Raymond Central won first place awards. The 4-Hers, all from Brewster, included Lisa and Allison Miller, Lloyd Wescott and Kenton Shipporeit. The Raymond Central team was composed of Clark Nelson and Russell Anderson, both of Ceresco, and Keith Kubik and Harvey Benis, both of Valparaiso.

State Elks Youth Group Places First

Ogallala (AP)—The Nebraska Elks Association Youth Committee, headed by Tom Plummer Jr., Brule, has been named first-place winner in the national Elks youth competition.

This is the sixth time in the last eight years that the Nebraska Elks have won the honor.

The award is based half on youth activities in the state and half on the guidance provided by the state committee.

Plummer said Nebraska Elks spent $117,221 on youth programs involving 34,000 youths of all races and creeds, or $3.68 for every Elk in the state.

Nebraska will receive an award at the national convention July 9-16 in Atlantic City, N.J., for having 100% participation in youth programs by the 26 lodges. The state will also receive a first-place award for its basketball "hoop-shoot" contest, in which 5,564 youngsters from all 26 lodges competed. Jim Anderson of Kearney was state chairman lodges competed. Jim Anderson of Kearney was state chairman for the event.

Lincoln Elks were second in the nation among lodges of more than 3,000 members for their youth program, while North Platte took second for lodges of 1,000 to 2,000 members. Ainsworth was third among lodges with 300 to 600 members, and Falls City was first among lodges of 300-600 members for its Youth Week program.

Three Women Killed In Two-Car Accident

McCool Junction (AP) — Three persons were killed and four others were injured in a two-car crash near here Monday.

The State Patrol identified the victims as Marjorie Warren, 51, Hastings, the lone occupant of one of the cars, Anna Mueller, 55, Geneva, and Barbara Mueller, 41, Covina, Calif., daughter-in-law of Anna Mueller.

The patrol said Barbara Mueller's husband was driving the second car involved.

Injured were Richard Mueller, 29, Covina, Calif., husband of Barbara Mueller; Richard Gonzales, 6, Covina, Calif., son of Barbara Mueller by a previous marriage; and Tommy Bartak, 6, and his brother, Stanley, 7, of Geneva, grandsons of Anna Mueller. The Bartak boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bartak of Geneva.

The three deaths boosted Nebraska's 1972 traffic death toll to 185, compared with 138 on this date one year ago.

NPPD Tells McCook Plant Pollution To Be At Minimum

McCook (UPI) — The McCook City Council was assured by a representative of the Nebraska Public Power District noise and pollution would be at a minimum when two gas turbine engines are installed along Highway 83 just northwest of here.

The meeting with project engineer Bill Fish was called after it was determined the district has already started building the facility without getting a building permit, required for such structures located within a two-mile radius of the city.

Similar turbines are being installed at Hallam and Hebron at a total cost of $11,214,600. The McCook units will cost $4.5 million.

The units would be operated by remote control out of NPPD's Hastings dispatch office.

Fish assured councilmen the turbine engines would be enclosed within two steel walls and eight inches of sound absorbing material. He said any air pollution created would well meet state standards.

Fish also invited councilmen to inspect a similar facility at Webster City, Iowa.

The council will meet again July 5 to further discuss the situation.

An employe of Dale Electronics, Mr. Beaty was hospitalized with a recurring kidney problem, the result of a cave-in injury received 17 years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Sharron; daughter, Michelle, 2; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beaty of Wakefield; two brothers and two sisters.

Signal Oil And Gas Gets New President

Los Angeles (AP) — Willis H. Thompson, a geologist who joined Signal Oil & Gas Co. in 1964, was elected president of the company.

He was previously executive vice president and manager of international exploration.

Frank D. Lortscher will continue as chairman and chief executive.

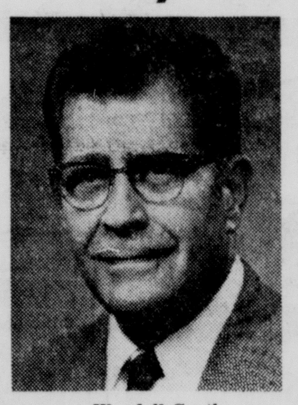
Groth Last Presbyterian Leader

Hastings — A business executive, civic leader and ruling elder from Westminster Presbyterian Church in Lincoln Tuesday became the last to serve as moderator of the Nebraska Synod of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

The election and installation of Wendell Groth, 62, head of a Lincoln insurance firm, came during the opening session of the synod's 99th annual meeting which opened Tuesday afternoon on the Hastings College campus.

The new moderator will preside during the synod's three-day meeting and serve as chairman of the Nebraska Synod Council during the term prior to the merging of the state's four eastern presbyteries with the synods of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Iowa, on Jan. 1, 1973.

The new six-state regional 1 area of Presbyterian government will be known as the Synod of Lakes and Prairies with headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn.



Wendell Groth

Nebraska's Box Butte Presbytery, which comprises the Nebraska Panhandle, will join with Wyoming, Montana, Utah and Colorado to form the Synod of the Rocky Mountain.

Groth assumed his role as head of Nebraska's 56,000 Presbyterians by accepting the gavel from outgoing moderator Dr. Theron B. Maxon, retiring president of Hastings College. Duties of the moderator also include membership on the Nebraska Synod's committee on management of its present headquarters and religious bookstore in Omaha.

Formation of the new six-state regional synod is a result of a plan for reorganization within the Presbyterian denomination initiated in 1963. The move will reduce the number of Presbyterian synods throughout the U.S. from a total of 35 to 17.

Adopted by Nebraska Presbyterians last year at the annual meeting here, the plan received nationwide approval last month at the annual meeting of the church's General Assembly in Denver.

About 200 persons are attending the Hastings meeting.

Sunday Postal Service Will Be Continued

Lincoln Star Special

Omaha — Sunday postal service to second, third and fourth-class towns in Nebraska will continue indefinitely, U.S. Postal Service authorities announced late Tuesday.

E. L. Paulsen, manager of the Omaha postal district which includes all of Nebraska, revealed that curtailment of Sunday service slated to have taken affect July 1 in Nebraska's postal service "have been deferred pending more study and evaluating of the U.S. Postal Service."

"The effect of rural Nebraska communities that depend on the postal service for delivery of newspapers on Sunday will be further weighed against postoffice costs for this Sunday service," he said.

Meanwhile, service to the postoffices will follow schedules that were in effect July 1, 1972, Paulsen explained.

Revised instructions have been issued to Nebraska postmasters and Star Route contractors, and notice has been given newspapers affected by the change, according to Paulsen.

Monday, officials in Omaha said the postal service had postponed by three weeks the scheduled July 1 implementation date to give newspapers making Sunday deliveries more time to plan alternate methods of delivery.

Nebraska newspapers affected include the Lincoln Sunday Journal-Star, the Omaha World-Herald and Scottsbluff Star-Herald.

U.S., France, Italy Plan Battle On Arms Sales To Brazil

Brasilia (AP) — The gong has sounded for the decisive round of a hush-hush arms sales battle between France and the United States in Brazil-Latin America's biggest and fastest-growing country.

Even dark horse Italy plans to enter the ring before the final bell and plans to turn the fight into a free-for-all.

At stake are contracts worth hundreds of millions of dollars from Brazil's armed forces, who are undertaking re-equipment of everything from small arms to supersonic jet fighter planes.

The most coveted prize in the sales war will be a go-ahead from Brazil for an outside group to build a multimillion-dollar factory to turn out about 100 jet fighters through 1978.

Some time before the end of next year, President Emilio G. Medici is expected to decide whether he wants Brazil's air force to fly locally built French Mirages, U.S. F5E Freedom Fighters from Northrup Aviation, or Italian Fiat G91s.

A steady stream of visitors, top-level foreign military brass as well as executives of private defense contractors, plus frequent parties and junkets have been wooing the Brazilian army, navy and air force.

The great arms war, as some local military men are fond of calling it, began with a few quick victories by the French. In 1970, they sold the Brazilians sixteen $3 million, 1,500-mile-per-hour Mirage 5s.

Otomat Missiles

This was followed by quick bids for French-Italian sea-to-air Otomat missiles to be used on some of the six Vosper MK10 frigates Brazil ordered from England.

Even Australia got into the act, with a $20 million anti-submarine weapons sale, and there were reports the Brazilian navy was out shopping in places as diverse as Scotland and Israel.

But it was the French arms sales offensive that was gaining the most ground, not only in Brazil but throughout Latin America.

A U.S. Commerce Department study last year showed the United States had "lost" more than a billion dollars in arms sales in Latin America over the past decade — to the detriment of the U.S. balance of payments.

Last year, the Nixon administration waived the self-imposed $75-million a year limit on arms sales to Latin America and asked Congress to raise it to $150 million.

It was no secret that pro-American Brazil, with the fastest growing economy on the continent and the armed forces in control, was one of the main targets of the U.S. reversal.

219 Tanks

Soon came orders for 219 light Bulldog M41 tanks, which the United States was phasing out at bargain prices. This set back the French, who manufacture more modern AMX13 tanks in Argentina and were anxious to make a sale here.

To sweeten the tank deal, the Americans sold Brazil 500 low-priced M113 armored personnel carriers which had seen better days in Vietnam.

Vietnam weapons, in fact, were a major item of discussion when presidential counselor Robert Finch toured Latin America last year and conferred with political leaders. He told newsmen the question most frequently asked was: "What will happen to U.S. weapons after Vietnam?"

Not to be left behind, the French came back with a proposal to provide radar and other flight guidance equipment for Rio's future supersonic international airport and expanded military base. Last month, France's Thomson-Houston CSF landed a $59 million contract.

Now, the decisive round is coming up — patrol planes and fighter planes.

Coastline Surveillance

The United States is confident that Brazil will soon purchase P3 Orion patrol planes to survey the country's 4,600-mile Atlantic coastline, and the newly enacted 200-mile limit, which ironically the U.S. government opposes. The French are hoping for a sale of Atlantic Brequet planes.

French hopes were dashed earlier this year, however, when Air Force Minister Marcio de Sousa e Mello — a declared Francophile — was fired for reasons still undisclosed.

The Brazilians have made clear they are now interested in building their own jet fighters under license in Brazil. They already are assembling the first of 112 Aeromacchi jets from Italy — a deal valued at $70 million at the headquarters of the government-run aircraft company, Embraer, in Sao Jose dos Campos.

The industrial city near Sao Paulo, in the southeastern part of the country, presumably would be the base of the new jet fighter factory, coveted by Marcel Dassault, builder of the Mirage, and Northrup Aviation, which builds the F5E. Both have expressed willingness to set up plants there, it was learned here.

Military sources say the Italians have offered to invest $130 million in related industries if the Brazilians opt for their Fiat G91 jets.

Zeus-Dedicated, That's Carnation

Athens — The carnation's recorded history goes back to classic Greece, where as a member of the genus Dianthus, or Dios anthos, flower of the gods, it was dedicated to Zeus. Aristotle's pupil and heir, Theophrastus, named it Dianthus caryphyllus, or clove-scented pink, about 300 B.C. Greek athletes were crowned with garlands of carnations.

State Highway Projects Require Time, Planning

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

Nebraska's 9,800-mile state highway system took 57 years to put together and it isn't added on to in a day, or even a year.

"Unfortunately, there is no such thing as an instant bridge or an instant road," State Engineer Thomas Doyle said.

In fact, according to Don Swing, project development director for the Roads Department, the minimum time is three years and the maximum is seven—on the average.

The three-to-seven year range, officials said, would be assuming a proposed project had a high priority, based on background studies; was compatible with 20-year need projections; and funding predictions indicated the money would be available.

Even from the inside of the process, nothing can be guaranteed.

Nearly 20 Years

Thane Davis of Hyannis, chairman of the State Highway Advisory Commission, said he worked nearly 20 years on one project—Highway 61.

The planning process itself, in addition to need projections, includes a five-year tentative plan updated annually and a one-year firm list.

Projects fed into the planning process have a number of sources. Some originate from local government levels, including private citizens, while others originate with the state.

Nebraska is divided into Roads Department districts and Jerry Grauer, programming and planning engineer, said every mile of highway in the state is driven and evaluated at least once every two years.

That, he said, yields a number of projects.

After a proposal has been fed into the works, it must advance through a series of 32 stages.

Doyle said that compares with 10 steps required in the 1950's.

No Shortcuts

He also said each is required by the federal government and there are no shortcuts.

"Even a modification of a rest area has to technically go through the same steps as a major freeway," he said.

There are some exceptions, Doyle said, but they are few and the federal government dictates the terms.

In recent times, safety oriented projects have gained a high priority and need not go through all stages. The federal government has additionally encouraged the safety projects by making funds available over and above normal state apportionments.

Other than that, Doyle said, it is "physically impossible" to get much of anything done in less than three years even if the federal government doesn't have a direct interest in a project.

Federal Interest

The federal interest in Nebraska's road program amounts to about 35% of the yearly $100 million budget.

Local government contributes about five per cent and the state pays the remainder.

Harris Owens of the Roads Department fiscal staff said among the three levels of government involved in funding, there are about 28 different revenue sources.

Overall, Doyle said, the state has a great deal of flexibility in meeting its highway needs.

But, he said, a year's list of firm projects must generally fit into one of seven categories of roads spelled out in the federal government's apportionment formula which range from Interstate down to rural roads.

The success and continuity of the state's planning process, both financial and physical, depends on the ability to second-guess future federal guidelines.

"Forecasting the financial end of it," Owens said, "is an art in itself."

He said the federal government does give some financial indications, but it is up to the state to put it in writing and match it with predicted road building emphasis.

The one-year plan ultimately developed is based on final guidelines and spending authorizations issued by the Administration about three to six months ahead of the beginning of a new fiscal year.

5-Year Plans

Owens said the five-year plans are not error free, but are generally close to the final determinations.

However, the business of making money forecasts and dispatching a proposal through 32 steps is not designed to keep the bureaucracy busy or hinder progress, according to Doyle.

It is all designed to answer one basic question—the need for construction.

In 1955, the Legislature imposed a 10,000-mile limit on the state highway system.

Restraints Needed

Doyle said although it may have seemed to some an imaginary limit without any real meaning, road building needs some kind of restraints.

Even though the statutory limit amounts to an "artificial restraint," he said, it does serve a purpose—to prevent over-building.

"For every mile we go beyond a certain limit, we would tax our ability to maintain it once completed," Doyle explained.

Thus, he said, "we must strike a balance" and observe limits.

In addition to the physical limitations, environmental ones play an important role in the final decision on whether to build, he said.

Both aspects are covered in the various tages of planning, he added.

Projects Must Survive 32 Steps

By United Press International

Local control over road building was preempted by state and federal government in 1915 and officials concede the public wasn't exactly consulted about highways in those early years.

Nor, were environmental considerations given much weight. Resources were plentiful—many thought inexhaustible — and the air was clean.

But, today a series of 32 steps have evolved which a proposed project must successfully negotiate in sequence before traffic moves.

The goals of the steps, according to State Engineer Thomas Doyle, are basically to prove overall need; citizen support; and the ability of the environment to withstand progress.

Public opinion, said the engineer, is specifically provided for at nine of the steps. But, he said, it is welcome at any time.

Views Sought

At any point from the initiation stage to the actual letting of contracts, or even later, the views of the public are not only proper, but are encouraged," he said.

Without public acceptance, Doyle said, the project "simply will not be as likely to achieve the desired results."

Public contact with the road building process can be achieved in a variety of ways. They include direct contact with the department; writing to the governor; or an appeal to the State Highway Advisory Commission.

The commission has a number of responsibilities. It acts as a clearing house for new ideas and its seven members, gubernatorially appointed by districts, act as first line contacts with the public.

They also conduct the public hearings required by law.

Substantial Impact

Roads Department officials, noting the commission actually has only an advisory power, contend, however, it has a substantial impact on construction plans.

"It isn't required by law, but as a matter of practice we turn to them for guidance at a number of stages," said Jerry Grauer, program and planning engineer.

The ultimate authority, however, rests with the state engineer. He is appointed by the governor as a member of his personal staff.

The public, in turn, has a number of interests in road building. Given a high priority in recent years is the ecological impact.

Mrs. Georda Willard, the department's environmental specialist, is handed a proposal when it is about halfway through the 32 consideration steps.

Environmental Statement

Doyle said the environmental statement prepared at that stage under her direction "could ultimately mean dropping the whole project."

Mrs. Willard has a list of 23 questions which must be answered on each project from which the environmental impact statement is prepared.

Included are such things as the "asethetics" of the proposal; the character of the area's population; conservation; plus specific impact on noise levels and air and water quality.

Once the list of questions has been answered, they are evaluated by others. Doyle said each point in the environmental statement is considered individually and in relation to other factors such as overall need.

"Sometimes, it boils down to being a question of no reasonable or acceptable alternatives for some projects with a high need factor," he said.

Working Proposal

But before ecology becomes a factor, there must be a working proposal.

Grauer begins with preliminary information, which then goes through a classification process to determine generally the kind of road needed. Sufficiency ratings are figured and compared with long-range goals.

After Grauer's department finishes, according to Charles Nutter, deputy state engineer for design, the proposal is assigned one of nine basic construction plans.

At that point, financial data is attached for refinement at each step of the way.

Formal hearings are conducted in the area involved on possible routings, followed by corridor selection and preparation of the ecological statement.

By the time a proposal reaches the halfway mark, the public has been consulted at least four times, along with local government officials.

Ready For Hearing

At the 24th stage of development, the design of the project is ready for its hearing. Testimony is gathered and the final plans are prepared.

It is at that point the sometimes distasteful contacts with the public are made—acquisition of the right-of-way for the road.

It is also the time land speculators, hoping for high yield investments via either negotiations or courts condemnation proceedings, become a problem.

Harris Owens, a member of the department fiscal staff, said legislation has been prepared for consideration by next year's Legislature to cover the situation.

"What we want to do is fix land use in an area so we don't end up paying for something built there after it was decided to put in a new or improved roadway," he said.

Land Costs

Land costs, he added, usually account for 10 to 12% of the total project cost. However, Owens said, in urban areas the costs could run substantially higher.

Once land has been purchased, plans are assembled and contractor bids are in order. But, Owens said, the time span between drawing up final plans and bid lettings is not short.

"We're working on bid lettings for two years in the future right now," he said.

Step 31 is construction, followed by the final one—opening the new roadway. But, according to the department, while that may be the end for thot particular project, the road building process remains far from complete.

In one of its brochures, the department stated: "The program is an on-going one because experience shows that highway work is never-ending."

Delegation From Alabama Seated

Washington (AP)— The Credentials Committee of the Democratic National Convention voted 69 to 55 late Tuesday to seat Alabama's 37-member delegation, including 29 pledged to Gov. George C. Wallace.

At the same time, the 150-member panel received a report from a hearing officer which held strongly in favor of challengers trying to unseat Mayor Richard Daley and 58 other uncommitted delegates from Chicago.

In another major development, another hearing examiner issued findings which appeared to support front-running Sen. George McGovern's claim to all 271 California delegates.

The Illinois and California cases were to be taken up by the full committee later in the week.

The vote to seat Alabama's regular delegation — which was challenged by a predominantly black faction — is almost certain to be disputed on the floor of the convention in Miami Beach.

The delegation was accused by challengers of having inadequate representation of women and minorities and improprieties leading to the delegate primary last May.

In another delegate fight, the convention's credentials Committee Tuesday rejected by a vote of 70 to 56 a move to realign the South Carolina delegation on grounds it contains too few women.

In the Chicago challenge, hearing examiner Cecil F. Poole found that Daley and 58 other delegates from Chicago were slated in violation of party reform rules on "procedures, notice, openness and timeliness."

Poole, in his report, made no recommendation for action to be taken against the Chicago delegation. The full committee is expected to take up the case Friday and decide how many, if any, of Daley's delegate seats should be awarded to the insurgents, two-thirds of whom support front-running Sen. George S. McGovern.

Poole's report was made public Tuesday after it was quoted by a challenging Chicago alderman, William Singer.

Finance Charges Deductible

Washington (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service declared for the first time Tuesday that all the finance charges on revolving charge accounts are deductible as interest on income tax returns.

The ruling allows taxpayers legally to deduct all the finance charges made on credit purchases in revolving charge accounts that charge 18% or more a year in interest.

A spokesman for the IRS said that in the past taxpayers were limited to deducting 6% of the average unpaid monthly balance under a special statutory rule covering purchases of items in installments where carrying charges are separately stated.

The ruling applies to hundreds of millions of dollars in purchases.

The ruiling is retroactive to returns that are considered "open," those that have been filed in the past three years.

But it is considered doubtful that many taxpayers would file amended returns to change the amount of their deductions and get a refund. In most cases the amount of refund would be small.

The IRS ruling would affect revolving charge accounts at retail stores as well as charges on items bought through bank credit cards.

(Total finance charges on purchases through bank credit cards are already deductible as interest.)

Under the usual revolving charge account scheme, no charge is made to the customer's account if purchases are paid for within 30 days from the billing date.

If full payment is not made within 30 days, the store adds a charge to the customer's account based on the unpaid balance at the beginning of the month. In most cases, that monthly rate is 1½%.

House OKs Debt Ceiling Extension

Washington (AP) — The House voted Tuesday to extend until Oct. 31 the $450-billion national-debt ceiling, after beating a move to convert it into a tax-reform measure.

The bill, limiting the Treasury's borrowing authority, pegs the existing ceiling at $15 billion less than President Nixon had requested. It virtually assures another congressional debt fight prior to Oct. 31, keeping open options of tax reforms in the meantime.

Without the extension, the present $450-billion ceiling would drop to $400 billion next Friday midnight, or more than $25 billion less than the actual estimated debt at that time.

The President wanted a $465-billion lid through next February.

Before sending the bill to the Senate by roll call vote of 211 to 168, the House defeated a move by Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., to permit amendments to plug what he called tax-law loopholes favoring wealthy taxpayers and corporations.

His motion lost by vote of 207 to 180.

Israel To Continue Raids If Guerrillas Supported

By United Press International

Israel said Tuesday it would continue its attacks into Lebanon, despite a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the raids, as long as the Lebanese government continued its support to Arab guerrillas.

The announcement followed a shooting incident on the Israeli-Lebanese border which left one man dead.

An Israeli military spokesman said the victim was one of two Arab guerrillas who had set an ambush for an Israeli army patrol. A Lebanese military spokesman said the dead man was a civilian killed in an Israeli ambush inside Lebanon.

The shooting occurred about the same time the U. N. Security Council was voting 13-0 on a resolution condemning Israel for its attacks into neighboring countries. The resolution also asked Israel to return Syrian and Lebanese military personnel captured during an Israeli raid into Lebanon last Thursday.

Scathing Criticism

Foreign Minister Abba Eban, in a scathing criticism of the U.N. action, called the resolution "inequitable and discriminatory."

"The Security Council has adopted an inequitable and discriminatory resolution that does wanton offense to the Israeli victims of repeated terroristic attacks," Eban said in an interview on national radio.

"The resolution refuses specifically to condemn the murder of Israelis and restricts its condemnation to the measures taken by Israelis to avoid being murdered," he said.

"The startling immorality of this formulation does no credit to the majority of the Security Council — half of whose members mantain no relations with Israel — while others adapt themselves too readily to the situation of bias inherent in the council's composition," Eban said.

Freeze Operations

A Beirut newspaper said Monday guerrillas had agreed to "freeze" their operations along the border at the request of the Lebanese government.

A spokesman in Beirut also said Palestinian guerrillas rocketed Israeli positions in Syria's occupied Golan Heights twice Monday. He said the Israelis responded with a mortar and rocket attack of their own.

The spokesman said the guerrillas fired on positions at El-Kheshina and ambulances were seen evacuating casualties. There were no guerrilla casualties, the spokesman said.

A spokesman in Tel Aviv said the shooting incident occurred in the northeast corner of the country near the settlement of Dan. He said two Arab guerrillas opened fire on an Israeli patrol, wounding three soldiers. The soldiers fired back, killing one of the men. The other guerrilla escaped, the spokesman said.

In Beirut, a spokesman said eight Israeli military vehicles crossed into Lebanon and Israeli soldiers set up an ambush.

Senate Tables Motion To Halt Aid To Brazil

Washington (AP) — The Senate, in effect, defeated an amendment Tuesday to eliminate military assistance and sales to Brazil.

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., would have invoked the suspension until the Inter-American Human Rights Commission determined that Brazil is not torturing political prisoners.

But the Senate, heeding the advise of the State Department, voted 60 to 30 to approve a motion by Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., to table the amendment, thus killing it.

The assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, Charles A. Meyer, in a letter to Sparkman, said passage of the amendment would be considered by Brazilians as "offensive and a clear intervention in their domestic affairs."

Meyer said the State Department has expressed its concern to Brazil on treatment of prisoners in that country and has received assurances that brutality is not official policy.

However, Meyer conceded that members of the Brazilian government have acknowledged that "incidents of brutality have occurred."

Secret Papers Show Why U.S., Hanoi Couldn't Agree

©The New York Times

By NEIL SHEEHAN

Washington — The Pentagon Papers volumes on the secret diplomacy of the Johnson administration show that Hanoi and Washington could not reach a peace settlement because they could not compromise their basic disagreement over who would hold power in South Vietnam.

The last four volumes of the secret history of the Indochina War reveal that Hanoi, despite mounting levels of punishment, was adamantly clinging to its long-term objective of unifying Vietnam into one country under a Communist form of government.

The history shows Washington just as adamantly clinging to its objective of permanently dividing Vietnam into two states and preserving a non-Communist South.

The volumes on the negotiations begin in mid-1964 and end in May 1968, shortly after President Johnson made possible the opening of the Paris talks by limiting the bombing of North Vietnam to the 20th Parallel and announcing his decision not to seek another term.

It Reveals Much

The Pentagon history does not contain major revelations, but it does reveal much about the attitudes of both sides, the style of their diplomacy, and why they could not reach a settlement.

Among the major points are these:

—The volumes do not indicate any missed opportunities for peace.

—While there may have been some misunderstanding, both sides understood farily well what each wanted. The problem was that neither side was willing to compromise on the basic substance of its position.

—What misunderstanding did exist seems to have been more on the part of Washington, which apparently could not believe that the Vietnamese Communists would adhere to their basic objective under the rising level of pain being inflicted by American military power.

—Hanoi conducted relatively open diplomacy, saying virtually the same thing in private that it did in public.

—Hanoi was willing to compromise only to the extent of giving Washington a face-saving method of withdrawal from the South and of postponing the achievement of its long-term objective for a few years by the creation of a supposedly neutralist regime in the South.

—When Washington spoke publicly of negotiations, it usually meant in private the arrangement of a similar face-saving way for Hanoi to halt the war in the South in exchange for an end to American bombing and ground intervention.

—Hanoi did not attempt to use the peace movement in the United States as a channel for negotiations. Rather, it seems to have regarded the peace movement as evidence of a fundamental political weakness in American policy that would tell against Washington in the end.

—Washington in turn tended not to take seriously non-Communist intermediaries, such as the Swedes, who were critical of American Vietnam policy.

—The bombing appears to have made Hanoi more determined to achieve its basic objective of unifying Vietnam under its leadership.

The unwillingness to compromise on basic positions was evident in the first diplomatic contact in June 1964 through J. Blair Seaborn, the Canadian delegate to the International Control Commission, and in the first bombing pause for five days in May 1965, codenamed Mayflower by the State Department.

Message Conveyed

On June 18, 1964, Seaborn conveyed a verbal message from the Johnson administration to Premier Pham Van Dong of North Vietnam. The message said the United States was determined to preserve a non-Communist South and threatened "the greatest devastation" against North Vietnam itself if Hanoi did not halt the Viet Cong guerrilla rebellion in the South and the conflict escalated.

The Pentagon history says Dong "laughed and said he did indeed appreciate the problem." He is reported to have replied that while North Vietnam "will not provoke the U.S." apparently through overt intervention, Hanoi would continue to support the Viet Cong and: "We shall win."

He proposed as a "just solution" an American withdrawal from the South and the creation of a neutralist regime there in accordance with the publicly announced program of the Viet Cong.

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk reflected Washington's attitude of no compromise on the essentials in a conversation with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin May 11, 1965, at the outset of the Mayflower bombing pause. Rusk noted, in a cable relating the conversation which the Pentagon historians quote, that Dobrynin asked if the pause meant "any change in the fundamental U.S. positionn."

"I replied that it did not and that this should be no surprise," Rusk wrote. The Soviets then refused to deliver to the North Veitnamese a secret message that amounted to an ultimatum to call off the Viet Cong and withdraw from South Vietnam or face more American bombing.

Stiffening

The stiffening of the North Vietnamese determination that the escalating bombing seems to have cause, despite the constant hope of Washington that the bombing would force Hanoi to compromise its basic objective, is strikingly evident in the remarks of Dong to two French scientists in July 1967 when the bombing was at its height.

The two scientists, Herbert Marcovich and Raymond Aubrac (Aubrac was a friend of the late President Ho Chi Minh went to Hanoi as intermediaries for the Johnson administration. Their mission was arranged and supervised by Henry Kissinger, then a Harvard professor and now President Nixon's special assistant for National security affairs.

The message they carried to Hanoi was essentially the same as the earlier ones.

Dong replied Hanoi knew that "U.S. power is enormous and the U.S. government wants to win the war. President Johnson is suffering from a pain and this pain is called South Vietnam . . . There we think that attacks on the North are likely to increase. We have made provisions for attacks on our dikes, we are ready to accept war on our soil. Our military potential is growing because of aid from the U.S.S.R. and other socialist countries."

'Genghis Khan Worse'

"Now I shall talk to you about negotiations and solutions," Dong continued. "We have been fighting for our independence for 4,000 years. We have defeated the Mongols three times. The United States Army, strong as it is, is not as terrifying as Genghis Khan."

He again replied to Washington that the solution for the United States was to withdraw from South Vietnam and permit the creation of a neutralist regime there.

"To the extent they believed each other, the two sides were amply forewarned that a painful contest lay ahead," the Pentagon historians write in their opening chapters on the secret diplomacy. "Even so, they (the two sides) were not included to compromise their way out. They held very different estimates of the efficacy of U.S. military might. We thought its pressures could accomplish our goals. The Communists did not."

Soviet Interest Grew In Go-Between Role

©The New York Times

Washington — Newly disclosed sections of the Penagon Papers show that the Soviet Union, after first rebuffing American requests in 1965 to serve as a middleman in ending the Vietnam war, became progressively more interested in acting as a diplamatic chanel between Washington and Hanoi.

But, the papers add, Moscow always seemed unwilling to put presure on North Vietnam to give up its struggle.

The diplomatic volumes of the Pentagon Papers paid close attention to the Soviet Union's often ambiguous role in the Vietnam war during the period covered by the study, 1965-68. Evidence from other sources, moreover, indicates that after the start of the Paris talks on Vietnam in May 1968, the Russians continued to play a low-key, behind-the-scenes role to smooth the course of negotiations.

Shortly After Bombing

American concern with the Soviet Union's relations with Hanoi began shortly after the United States began bombing North Vietnam in February, 1965, the study said. On April 5, American intelligence spotted the first Soviet anti-aircraft site under construction 15 miles southweast of Hanoi.

"The Soviet Union was now in the process of becoming visibly committed to assisting North Vietnam in resisting U.S. attacks," the study said. "and a more direct confrontation of U.S. and U.S.S.R. military force was rapidly approaching"

The study speculated that this was one of the elements in President Johnson's mind when he ordered a week-long halt in the bombing beginning May 12. In a highest priority message to American Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor in Saigon, Johnson said he would not announce the pause, "but simply call it privately to the attention of Moscow and Hanoi as soon as possible" and seek some reciprocity from Hanoi.

But calling it to their "attention" proved frustrating.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk called in Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin to explain what was happening. Rusk, in his account of the meeting which is reported by the study, said Dobrynin "noted we were merely informing Soviets and was clearly relieved we are not asking them to act as intermediary."

Not Received

In Moscow, U.S. Ambassador Foy D. Kohler was told to deliver a message to the North Vietnamese embassy, but the North Vietnamese envoy refused to receive him because the two countries did not maintain diplomatic relations. Kohler said he should deliver his message instead to the Soviet government since it was a co-chairman of the Geneva Conference on Indochina.

Kohler was received by Deputy Foreign Minister Nikolai P. Firyubin who lectured him on the American "aggression" in Southeast Asia.

After further discussion, Firyubin 'said flatly that the Soviet government would not transmit the U.S. government's message to the DRV (Democratic Republic of Vietnam or North Vietnam).

"I said that what I was seeking was the cooperation of the Soviet government and Firyubin's remarks indicated clearly that the Soviet government was refusing this. Firyubin said, 'I am not a postman,' and again said we could find our own ways of transmitting messages,'' Kohler cabled Washington.

Understandable

Later, Kohler told Washington that he could understand the Soviet sensitivity, given the Chinese eagerness "to adduce proof of their charges of collusion" between the Soviet Union and the United States.

He cautioned against regarding the refusal as evidence of a hardening of Soviet attitude. "It may simply be reflection of bind Soviets find themselves in at moment."

On May 15, 1965, Rusk was in Vienna, Austria, and met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, who told him that the Soviets "will not negotiate about Vietnam."

Throughout 1966, the Soviets played a passive role, but, as the study indicates, they were among those who told the United States that if it would halt the bombing of North Vietnam for more than a week — for about two or three — substantive talks might begin, which was then one of Washington's priority objectives.

Early In 1967

It was not until February 1967, when Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin was in London on an official trip, that significant Soviet interest is the talks was shown.

"The British were first startled, then delighted, to find Kosygin eager to play an active role as intermediary between the U.S. and Hanoi," the study said. He agreed to pass on American proposals to Hanoi, even though the United States knew North Vietnam would reject them.

In a discussion with the American ambassador in Moscow, Llewellyn E. Thompson, Feb. 18, 1967, Kosygin said he had agreed to the middleman role because Hanoi had given him a green light, the papers said.

The Kosygin effort, which ended in failure, was codenamed "Sunflower," and was marked, the study said, by "the shadow of China," which then had no direct contact with the United States.

Senate Alters Safety Regulations

. . . Farms, Businesses With Less Than 15 Employees Exempted

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted 45 to 41 Tuesday to exempt businesses and farms with fewer than 15 employes from the industrial safety requirements imposed by the federal government.

The action, which was a major dilution of the three-year-old Occupational Health and Safety Act, came as the Senate completed a $31 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. The measure, which passed 72 to 11, was swelled far beyond the $27.4 billion President Nixon requested for the two departments.

An amendment by Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., to exempt businesses with fewer than 25 employes from the safety act was defeated 44 to 41. Curtis then offered a second amendment reducing the cutoff to 15 employes, and it passed.

Lose Coverage

It is estimated some two-thirds of persons now covered by the bill would lose coverage if the Senate action became law.

The vote came after a stormy afternoon of debate in which Republicans charged that federal inspectors were harassing small businessmen with impossible and costly regulations to protect the lives of their employes.

Curtis, speaking from behind a three-foot-high stack of regulations and explanatory pamphlets which he said small businessmen must know by heart to comply with the safety act, accused the inspectors of "Gestapo" tactics.

He and other senators told of numerous examples of businessmen forced to shut their doors or pay fines for violating "Mickey Mouse" regulations they were not even aware of.

Almost a billion dollars was added to the HEW-Labor bill in the final moments before passage. This was for the first annual payment of benefits to coal miners suffering from black lung disease.

Didn't Reflect

As big as the bill was, it did not reflect an estimated $4.9 billion that will have to be appropriated later for programs still awaiting authorization legislation — including aid to higher education — nor at least $43 billion in Social Security benefits that are funded separately.

The House earlier approved budgets for Labor, HEW and related agencies totaling $28.6 billion, some $1.2 billion over Nixon's budget requests and $1.5 billion more than was spent this year on welfare, Medicare, job training and similar programs.

The bulk of the Senate increases came in the health care field — adding more than $1 billion than Nixon wanted to help train medical personnel, combat infectious diseases, build hospitals and continue research into a host of allocations ranging from cancer and heart disease to tooth decay and mental illness.

Evidently unsatisifed this was enough, the Seenate added more than $1 billion in floor amendments by voice votes. Included were an extra $176 million for elementary and secondary education; $58.6 million more in impact aid to local school districts with large tax-free federal installations; $35 million more for "developmental disabilities" of children including epilepsy and cystic fibrosis; $30 million extra for medical school construction, and $40 million more in impact aid for school districts with high proportions of public housing.

Also added was $120 million to fund a tough, expanded Work Incentive Program (WIN) that goes in Saturday and which requires all able-bodied welfare recipients to register for work or job training.

U.S. Sets Up A 5-Man Committee To Monitor Soviet Observance

By TAD SZULC

Washington — United States intelligence officials have established a committee to keep track of Soviet observance of the terms of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty signed in Moscow May 26.

The five-man committee is to begin functioning on July 1, the cutoff date agreed upon by the two governments for the construction of new sites for offensive missiles in the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Administration officials said the committee was set up to avoid the repetition on a broader scale of the violation of the Suez Canal truce in August, 1970, when the Soviet Union and Egypt moved into postiion SAM-2 and SAM-3 antiaircraft missiles after the cease-fire with Israel.

At that time, U.S. intelligence services were unprepared to monitor through aerial and satellite observation, and other means, Soviet and Egyptian fulfillment of the truce terms.

This was a source of major embarrassment to the U.S., which had negotiated the truce, and the incident nearly led to the collapse of the cease-fire.

The new committee, officials said, is to be headed by Lt. Gen. Vernon A. Walters, deputy director of Central Intelligence.

Its members are to be Lt. Gen. Donald V. Bennett, head of the Defense Intelligence Agency; Ray S. Cline, director of the State Department's Intelligence and Research Agency; Andrew Marshall, intelligence coordinator of the National Security Council at the White House; and a CIA official still to be designated.

The committee, officials said, will be linked to the White House Verification Panel, a senior body of the National Security Council responsible for the strategic arms negotiations.

The Moscow agreements on the limitation of defensive and offensive nuclear weapons formally come into force on ratification by the U.S. Senate and the Supreme Soviet.

However, both sides have agreed to abide by the treaty from the date it was signed by President Nixon and the Soviet Communist Party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Under the treaty, the Soviet Union is free to place up to 100 defensive launchers around Moscow — 64 of them are now in place — and it has the option of setting up an anti-ballistic defense at least 800 miles away from the capital to protect its offensive missiles.

U.S. may erect an antiballistic system around Washington and around its own offensive launcher positions.

Satellite and aerial observation and other techniques will be employed in the monitoring, officials said.

Winnebago Council Enjoined From Unseating 3 Members

U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom permanently enjoined Tuesday the Winnebago Indian Tribal Council from unseating three newly-elected members as a result of a disputed Oct. 5 election.

The three council members, Mrs. Cora Solomon, Matthew Cleveland and Louis Mallory, have been serving on the council under a temporary injunction granted last November by Judge Urbom.

Incumbents on the council had refused to seat the three newly-elected members following the Oct. 5 election, contending there were election irregularies.

In permanently enjoining the tribal council from giving any effect to its purported actions invalidating the election, Judge Urbom said in a memorandum opinion that the validity of a tribal election was not a proper determination for the council to make under the tribe's constitution and bylaws.

He said the council's powers are limited to determining whether elected members meet constitutional qualifications as to age and residency, and may otherwise remove elected members only for neglect of duty or gross misconduct by a two-thirds vote.

Judge Urbom also voided the council's action of Oct. 13 which ordered a new election on Oct. 26. Hearing on the requested permanent injunction sought by the three newly-elected members was held last week before Judge Urbom.

Yippies Plan To Shadow Mayor Daley

Miami Beach, Fla. (AP) — Yippie leaders Tuesday described plans for nonviolent activities during the Democratic National Convention, including a Yippie detail to follow Chicago Mayor Richard Daley wherever he goes.

However, Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman and several of their lieutenants said they would make no promise of peace during the Republican National Convention.

Rubin, who is known for his gags, quipped that, "If Martha (Mitchell) is not freed by the time of the convention, we're making no promises."

Yippie activities planned for the Democratic convention, July 10-14, include a march, two picnics, a ceremonial "marriage" of the movement people and Miami Beach's senior citizens, and a demand that all liquor stores close on July 10.

"We're all going to become Carrie Nations for a day," said Hoffman.

The Yippie leaders presented their plans at a news conference in the Youth International Party's offices here Tuesday.

Hoffman said the Yippies planned to greet Mayor Daley when he arrives at the Miami airport and follow him throughout the convention.

Noting that there have been delegate challenges to Daley's right to a seat at the convention, Hoffman said Yippies would present him with a chair at the airport.

"We're going to follow him everywhere he goes," said Ed Sanders, another Yippie leader. "Just like they did to us in Chicago. The Secret Service followed us."

Hoffman and Rubin were among the Chicago 7 convicted on charges stemming from violence at the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

In Chicago, Daley refused to comment on the Yippie plans.

County Agrees To Have All Contracts Reviewed

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Commissioners Tuesday adopted a policy to have all contracts, lease agreements and resolutions reviewed as to form by the county attorney prior to the board's taking action.

After Commissioner Robert Colin Tuesday inquired as to who prepared the contract between the county and Colonial Homes, Inc. for the operation of Lancaster Manor, it was suggested that all contracts be reviewed by the county attorney.

Colin quoted a section from a statute which provides that the county attorney approve all contracts, and County Attorney Paul Douglas said he was aware of the law but asked why many of the contracts entered into by the commissioners since Colin had been on the board had not been referred to him.

Colin claimed that he was not ware that there was such a law until very recently to which Douglas retorted that he was sure Colin knew about the law several months ago when he (Colin) cited it in a letter to his office requesting an opinion.

Douglas said it was embarrassing to him when people contacted him for information about contracts and agreements made by the commissioners which he had never seen because they had not been referred to him for review.

In other action, the commissioners voted to appoint a six-member committee of disinterested citizens to contact Colonial Homes, Inc. for the purpose of updating and clarifying the contract with Colonial Homes for the operation of Lancaster Manor.

It was agreed that each commissioner would name two of the members.

In the motion made by Commissioner Kenneth Bourne, it was mentioned that such things as depreciation schedules for equipment, value of property distributed to other county offices and use of land area by the county not previously anticipated could thereby be clarified.

The board scheduled July 25 for opening bids for the second phase of remodeling at Lancaster Manor.

The commissioners also agreed Tuesday to appoint the administrative board for the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) before July 1.

At the request of parents of children in LOMR programs, the commissioners indicated that the 12-member board would be appointed very soon so that it, in turn, could begin interviewing possible candidates for executive director of LOMR since the dismissal of John Luebs.

Eastern Reports $395,000 Loss For May Period

New York (AP)— Eastern Air Lines had a loss of $395,000 in May, compared with a loss of $844,000 in May, 1971, the carrier reported.

For the first five months of 1972, profits stood at $19.2 million, compared with a profit of $247,000 in the same period a year ago, said Charles J. Simmons, executive vice president-finance.

He noted that the May 1972 results were the first loss after six consecutive months of profitability.

Alaskan Court Rejects Bid To Halt Borough Certification

Fairbanks, Alaska (UPI) — The Alaska Supreme Court has cleared the way for the incorporation of the world's largest local government — a borough covering 56.5 million acres of oil-rich tundra.

Justice Roger Conner rejected an effort by seven oil companies to halt certification of last week's vote by 431 Eskimos to create the borough, which will have the power to tax the firms' holdings on Alaska's north slope.

Certification of the June 20 election, in which residents voted 404 to 27 for incorporation of the 88,258-square-mile area, was set for Wednesday in Nome.

Oil company attorneys said they were studying possible new legal moves.

Doyle Says Union Wage Controversy Distorted

By The Associated Press

Misinformation and misunderstanding have distorted the recent controversy over extension of union wage rates into the eastern one-third of Dodge County, the Legislature's Transportation Committee was told Tuesday.

State Engineer Thomas Doyle told the senators that Davis-Bacon wage floors are not directly affected although they ultimately could be influenced. He foresaw no immediate effect on highway construction costs or other costs if the proposal currently before the federal government's Construction Industry Stabilization Committee (CISC) is approved.

The long-standing Davis-Bacon Act provides that prevailing wage rates shall be a floor under wages paid on federally-aided projects.

What is involved, Doyle said, is federal ratification of an agreement between the operating engineers union and highway heavy contractors in the 4½ county Omaha metropolitan area to have their union wage agreements apply also to projects undertaken by these contractors in the eastern one-third of Dodge County.

Three other unions — laborers, teamsters and carpenters — have had such provision in effect since Jan. 1, 1971, he noted.

City officials in Dodge County recently asked Gov. J. J. Exon and Doyle to intervene in opposition to the operating engineers bid, contending the move could drastically increase costs of all types of public projects.

Doyle told the committee he interpreted the state's position as set out in a telegram subsequently sent by Exon to the CSIC as "not to attempt to inject the state as a third party in a two-party contract between a union and contractors."

Doyle said he would definitely oppose an extension of the Davis-Bacon metropolitan rate base into the Dodge County area, but said he could see no immediate effect of the operating engineers bid inasmuch as non-union contractors, operating under lower wage costs, could be expected to continue to submit low bids on projects in the area.

Doyle and State Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek, who had researched the matter for Gov. Exon, appeared before Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner's committee at the committee's request.

State AFL-CIO President William Brennan and Fremont City Administrator Jack Sutton also showed up and provided input.

Sutton said Fremont's concern is possible effect on millions of dollars worth of pending Fremont projects. He noted that the city expects to spend $17 million on a new power plant, $2.3 million on a sewage treatment plant, and will continue to spend thousands of dollars on street paving and resurfacing.

Doyle said the legislative committee, if concerning itself about getting value received for money spent on highway projects, should concern itself not only with union-contractor wage agreements, but other costs as well.

He suggested there may be lack of competition among contractors on some highway contracts, and that just because a bid is the lowest received does not mean that the project is going for the lowest possible cost.

He noted reports of cement shortages and recalled that such a shortage developed earlier on asphalt, only to disappear when prices were raised.

Burglary Reported

Approximately $1,400 in appliances and wearing apparel was taken in a burglary of the apartment of Ocie B. Tempel of 1025 No. 23rd, according to police. Items included a television set, tape player, typewriter, radio and five women's suits. Entrance was gained by forcing the front door.

Four Nominees Selected For Two Judgeships

The Third Judicial Nominating Commission Tuesday submitted to Gov. J. James Exon the names of four nominees for two Lancaster County District Court judgeships.

Supreme Court Judge Harry Spencer, who heads the commission, said names of the nominees will not be released until they are formally presented to the governor Wednesday.

Exon was attending a Midwest Governors Conference in Bismarck, N.D., Tuesday.

One nominee will be named by the governor to fill the new District Court post created by the 1972 Legislature when it increased Lancaster County's judgeships from four to five.

The other will fill the vacancy created by the death of Judge Bartlett Boyles.

Candidates for the posts include Betsy Berger, assistant attorney general for the state; William Blue, Lancaster deputy county attorney; Robert Camp, another assistant attorney general; Neal Dusenberry, Lincoln municipal judge; John Doyle, Lincoln attorney.

Others: Dale Fahrnbruch, Lincoln attorney; William Grossman, county commissioner; Warren Lichty Jr., another assistant attorney general; Thomas McManus, Lincoln municipal judge; Samuel Van Pelt, state insurance director and son of U.S. District Judge Robert Van Pelt.

The seven-member nominating commission held a hearing Tuesday to consider

Philippines Questions SEATO Role

©The New York Times

Sydney — The annual Ministerial Council of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization opened in Canberra Tuesday, with the Philippines raising the quesion of the alliance's present and future role.

The Filipino foreign secretary, Carlos Romulo, told the opening session in parliament house that SEATO needed a "massive transformation."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers of the United States, departing from his prepared text, challenged the Philippines' attitude and reaffirmed the United States' strong support for SEATO.

However,the Filipino attitude has support from the Australian Labor Party which has a strong chance of heading the Australian government after the national election later this year.

Romulo said SEATO "needs to redefine its purposes in the light of rapidly evolving times," and that "it needs to change its orientation to meet the new requirements of Southeast Asia."

Speaking immediately after the Filipino official, Rogers said: "We will remain fully in support of SEATO. We think that this is the worst possible time to talk about changing alliances that have made it possible for the very substantial changes that have come about in the world community today."

In his prepared speech, Rogers said the United States had reason to hope that increased diplomatic pressure on North Vietnam would lead it to undertake serious negotiation on a settlement to end the war.

"A generous basis for an equitable settlement is on the table for negotiation whenever Hanoi is prepared to start," the secretary said.

The Thailand foreign minister, Pote Sarasin, said: "SEATO's role as a shield of freedom against possible future open wars of aggression elsewhere in the treaty area should not be dismissed.

"There is also a continuing need for reassessment of SEATO's role and outlook in coping with changing realities and problems affecting regonal member countries."

The British foreign minister, Sir Alec Douglas Home, the New Zealand minister for foreign affairs, Sir Keith J. Holyoake, and the retiring SEATO secretary-general, Gen. Jesus Vargas, all attacked critics of SEATO.

Number Of Welfare Elderly Declines To A 32-Year Low

Washington (AP) — The number of elderly persons on welfare dropped to a 32-year low in February although overall relief rolls expanded by 97,000, the government announced Tuesday.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the Old Age Assistance (OAA) caseload decreased by 4,000 to 2,015,000, the lowest level since August 1940, despite a rapidly rising over-65 population.

The decline was attributed in large part to higher Social Security payments, which have gone up 26.5% the last two years while the cost of living rose only 9.7% during that period.

The aged-poor population could shrink even more if Sen. Frank, Church, D-Idaho, succeeds this week in attaching a 20% Social Security hike to the House-passed debt-limit bill.

The Church amendment has 60 Senate sponsors, and the backing of Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., of the Senate Finance Committee and Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Social Security boosts of 15% in January 1970 and 10% in January 1971 to 27.8 million recipients increased benefits from $100 to $129 for the average, single retired worker and from $170 to $223 for the average couple over 65. The Church measure would hike those benefits to $158 and $271 respectively.

The OAA program started in February 1936 reached an early peak of 2,254,000 recipients in June 1942, declined during the rest of the war years, then climbed steadily to a record 2,810,000 in September 1950.

When the slot machines hit a jackpot in Harrah's at Reno or Harrah's at Lake Tahoe, the machine lights up. Buzzers ring. It's like touching off a burglar alarm.

"That's advertising," said the executive in the Prospector's Club in Harrah's 24-floor hotel. "You hear that bell r inging 'money-from-home'. And you think, 'Man, I could be next'."

Harrah's has a floor of executive offices analyzing gambling into a computer business operation.

The exec said: "For one thing, we train our own dealers. We have a school. Bill is a great believer in youth—we recruit summer help right from the university here."

The decisions are made by Bill Harrah who started in 1937 with a Reno bingo parlor. When he sold stock last year, he found he was worth $150 million.

☆ ☆ ☆

"Bill went for the mod look about four, maybe five years ago," said the exec. "The mod hair cut. Buys his clothes from Brioni in Rome or Ron Postal in Beverly Hills. Tinted wire frame glasses—the ones he calls his 'Frank McGee glasses'.

"Now we all have to dress the part. 'We're all on display,' Bill says. 'We have to look up to date.' I mean if he sees one of us wearing an old style narrow tie, he mentions it.

"Maybe that's why he likes to have young dealers. The girls dealing blackjack average about 22.

☆ ☆ ☆

I went to see Bill Harrah to ask how you make $150 million in gambling.

He said: "We give them good entertainment. We pay a lot for entertainers and we pay a lot of attention to entertainers so they want to come back.

We put them in special suites on the 24th floor.

"We fly them up by private plane to a beautiful lodge we've got in Idaho."

He said: "Then we take care of the customer. In the hotel here, we put a fresh flower in each room every day. Little touches like that count.

"We can feed and entertain 5,000 people every night here and at Lake Tahoe.

"Everything we do has been worked out by accounting and analysis and observation."

☆ ☆ ☆

The slot machines at Harrah's have been set (by accounting procedure) to produce a lot of jackpots. The winning bells are always ringing somewhere.

Keno (you mark a choice of eight numbers on a card) can be played from your dining table. The cards are stacked between the sugar and cream.

A girl on the floor picks up your marked bet.

The card and winning numbers appear in the room on an electronic screen. Make your bet with the salad. You may be a winner by dessert.

Gamblers are a superstitious bunch. I've seen a house change—and throw away — all the dice on a table that was doing badly. Ten pairs at $2.50 a pair.

Not at Harrah's. The computer wouldn't stand still for it.

The Reno hotel has a 13th floor—something even straight hotels avoid.

"It's the 13th floor no matter what you call it," said Harrah. "We've never had anybody refuse it. Fact, some people ask for it."

☆ ☆ ☆

Slot machines—a third of Harrah's $85 million a year income—are the ringing heart of the operation. A long way from the old cherries, oranges and bells.

There are slots that pay on a tic-tac-toe arrangement. Slots set only for jackpot payoffs. Slots that run two reels at a time. (If they both jackpot, you own Harrah's.)

You can even play an electronic blackjack game by coin slot.

"We run like a modern factory," said a Harrah's exec. "A fortune factory. I don't mean cookies."

Nixon Gives 3rd Oak Leaf Cluster To Westmoreland

Washington (AP) — President Nixon presented a third oak leaf cluster for the Distinguished Service Medal to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, retiring Army chief of staff, and hailed his service to the country.

Westmoreland will be succeeded as Army chief by Gen. Creighton Abrams, who is returning from the top Army post in Vietnam.

Time Forgot Stone Age People Found In Philippine Rain Forest

(EDITORS NOTE: on the edge of the impenetrable rain forest of the southern Philippines lives a tiny band of people whose existence became known only last year. The 25 Tasadays live much as anthropologists believe prehistoric cavemen lived. A newsman who accompanied the expedition recounts here the first contact of scientists with the people that time forgot.)..

By JOHN NANCE
Associated Press Writer

Tasaday Forest, Philippines (AP) — The jet helicopter hovered in the cool air of the 4,000-foot-high mountains and four men leaped out, sprawling flat and clinging to a wooden platform tied into a treetop.

Air blasts from the rotor blades rocked their small landing pad like a canoe in choppy water.

The men peered over the edge. Seventy-five feet below was a ridgeline no wider than a car which plunged immediately into thick jungle as it slanted down another 300 feet.

The men were headed for the home of the Tasaday, the tiny band of Stone age-style people discovered last year at the edge of this vast and rugged southern Philippines rain forest.

The Tasaday — who live in caves, use stone tools, wear orchid leaves and know no enemies — said no outsider had ever seen their homes in a valley of the undulating forest. They said their ancestors had lived there since their knowledge of time began.

In an early March meeting at the forest's edge, the Tasaday invited visitors to their place, but one young man warned: "You may not be able to make it; the way is very difficult."

No Landing Space

The helicopter whirred into forest the misty morning of March 23rd. Tropical jungle with towering trees blanked the mountains, leaving no landing space on the steep slopes.

As the aircraft emerged between two peaks, a dot of yellow-brown appeared in the dark jungle below. The chopper dipped and the dot grew, revealing the platform made of branches and saplings.

Pilot Severino Bartolo circled once, nosed his helicopter up to the 12-by-14 foot pad and the doors were opened.

Manuel Elizalde Jr., president of Panamin, a government-supported foundation for assisting Philippine minorities, and leader of the expedition, leaped first, opening the latest and most exciting phase of discovery since he first contacted the band of 25 people last June.

Charles A. Lindbergh, the American pilot and conservationist who is a director of Panamin, joined the expedition two days later and said the "jump onto that platform was like passing through the looking glass" — it was the portal through which men passed from modern into ancient times.

Assisting the entry into the forest were 31 men — mostly of the Taboli, Ubu and Manubo blit tribes that live near the unexplored forest — who had trekked in five days earlier to prepare the landing place.

Prevented Clearing

The jagged, densely overgrown terrain prevented clearing a suitable site without levelling a large patch of forest. This was ruled out and the treetop platform was built.

Minutes after the helicopter delivered the first of its three loads, a young Tasaday man named Balayam arrived, hugged Elizalde and led the expedition down the steep ridge. Twelve persons in this group plus six who arrived on later days were the only persons to enter the caves, several just once.

TASADAY NATIVE . . . Balayam hams it up.

Elizalde and Kenneth Macleish of National Geographic magazine scrambled first after Balayam, but kept to the ground when the agile guide, wearing a leafy G-string, swung by vines and tree limbs.

Balayam led the party on an hours hike to a slope where the jungle thinned. Through the leaves the mouth of a cave was dimly visible.

A thin waterfall sprayed in front of it, pattered onto a rocky pool and trickles downhill.

Heads poked from ledges and two higher caves. A boy stepped from one, wrapped his arms and legs around a slender tree and slid 15 feet to the ground. He joined others who were shouting greetings and bounding down a dusty path to cluster around the visitors. The Tasaday nuzzled and embraced Elizalde, who they say is the man their ancestors had foretold would one day come to them.

Just Love Us

"He would just love us and help us—we were never told how," said Mahayag, a robust Tasaday man apparently in his late 20s.

The handsome men, women and children wore only earrings and leaves and their tan skin was streaked with soot from their fires. Their soft dark hair hung long and loose or was tied back with vines.

Some of the slender, muscular people smiled, others stared timidly at the first strangers ever to set foot in their valley.

Whether the caves have been the Tasaday's homes for a few generations or thousands of years is now known. Anthropologists in the expedition—Frank Lynch, a 52-year-old American who is program coordinator of the Institute of the Philippine Culture, and Carlos Fernandez, 30, from Palaway in the Western Philippines—said the discovery of the Tasadays and their cave homes was a major scientific event. Fernandez speculated it may be the most significant anthropological find of this or many centuries.

Scientists last year said the Tasaday's language and technology suggested they had been isolated more than 1,000 years.

Friendly

The Tasaday grew increasingly friendly during the expedition's visit and the shyest women and children eventually smiled and spoke through the Manubo blit woman and Taboli man, who acted as interpreters.

The people displayed the sparse possessions in their main cave, which has a 10-foot-high mouth. It is roughly 30 feet deep and 25 feet wide.

It contained a few mats of bark, deer horns for digging edible roots, odd bits of food, firewood, two favorite stone tools and collection of items—knives, woven baskets, a tin can that once held crackers and a batteryless flashlight—origin unknown.

Scientists Disappointed

No drawings marked the walls and the scientists were a bit disappointed at first over the lack of layers of debris on the cave floor for study; the cave had been swept out regularly over the years. They soon found, however, a deep mound of debris below the cave mouth which appeared to be the refuse of generatons. Scientists hope it will be a vault of Tasaday history.

A surprise was the small area over which the Tasaday range in their food quest, the main activity of the band. The jungle provides abundant food—river life, plants, insects, flowers, roots and the pith of trees—near the caves.

Balayam said he had never been away from the caves longer than three nights at one time.

Dafal, a hunter who gave the Tasaday their first metal knives, said meat constitutes a minimal part of the Tasaday diet because their animal traps are not efficient.

In Harmony

The jungle appeared virtually untouched by the Tasaday and they lived in harmony with it.

"They are creatures of this environment," Elizalde observed, "as much as the birds and trees."

The apparent happiness and harmony of Tasaday life was one of many things that intrigued outsiders. Panamin insists this not be upset, and its policy is to protect the Tasaday, limiting their contact with the 20th century.

Panamin decided on the March expedition because farmers were already encroaching on the forest and logging companies had already acquired claims on it.

Five days after the expedition ended, President Ferdinand E. Marcos signed a proclamation reserving some 20,000 hectares for the Tasaday and Manubo blit.

Malaysian-Trained Agents Cause Philippine Concern

By FRANK HAWKINS JR.
Associated Press Writer

Zambogana, Philippines (AP)— Malaysian-trained agents attempting to encourage a Moslem separatist movement in the troubled southern Philippines with money and high-powered weapons are causing increasing concern here, say government intelligence sources.

Intelligence reports say that as recently as last month about 250 Moslem youths were taken from southern Sulu Province by boat to Sabah in North Borneo for instruction in what were described as paramilitary tactics, including jungle warfare and survival.

The youths, the sources report, are expected to return to Sulu and neighboring Zamboanga Provinces to recruit and train other agents for a Moslem secessionist movement that has its roots in the former Mindanao Independence Movement.

Bloody Scene

Mindanao, the second largest island in the Philippines, has been the scene of bloody Christian-Moslem feuding for years. Government sources say that Malaysian trained agents — all of whom are believed to be Philippine born — are attempting to exploit the conflict by identifying Christian terrorists known as Ilagas or rats with government forces.

The infiltration program is described by one ranking intelligence officer as a "continuous, increased, aggressive recruitment with an increased amount of arms" being supplied by the Malaysians.

There was no indication of any funds or agents from the Middle East country of Libya despite a recent pronouncement by the Libyan Leader, Col. Muammar Kadafi, that he was giving money and arms aid to Moslems in the southern Philippines.

In the last few months, government agents have obtained possession of four automatic weapons called Sausi. According to these agents, 200 or more of these weapons used by Malaysian commandos have been smuggled into the Sulu area.

One intelligence group has pinpointed a former Filipino guerrilla officer as a Malaysian trained agent, claiming he is a source of arms and money to Moslems and Moslem outlaws in Sulu.

The intelligence reports were partly confirmed by a well known city mayor from Sulu Province. He said in an interview he was approached more than a year ago by Malaysian-trained agents who offered him funds and high-powered guns in exchange for support of the independence movement.

Asked For Help

"They asked me to help them by protecting their agents," the mayor said. "They told me: 'If you will help us we will give you support in the form of guns and arms. These guns can be used to fight the government.' "

The mayor did not identify the agents and asked that his own name not be made public.

The agents, he said, "are taking advantage of the Christian Moslem issue. They are saying it is a religious war, making it appear to rural folk that Christian bandits are part of the Philippine army. So if the army comes, there will be trouble."

The mayor, who is a Moslem and is well known for his efforts in promoting Christian-Moslem harmony, called the situation alarming.

The so-called Ipil incident, the mayor added, has made things worse. On June 10, in the wake of personal feuding between Moslem and Christian families in the city of Ipil, 45 miles north of Zamboanga, four Moslems and five Christians were killed in a shootout.

Hundreds of persons fled the town after the battle and many have not yet returned. In addition, government agents recently picked up two Ilaga agents who had come over from nearby Cotabato Province allegedly to stir up resentment against the Moslems.

Intelligence sources also said that two Malaysian-sponsored training camps were recently pinpointed in southern Sulu, one at Mt. Sinumaan and another near the town of Luuk.

Army leaders who originally denied the existence of the training camps have now confirmed their presence but say the camps have been abandoned.

The government's concern over the situation was heightened last week by a statement from an influential Moslem congressman from Sulu, Rep. Indanana Anni.

Might Secede

Before meeting President Ferdinand E. Marcos here last week, Anni told a reporter that Moslems in the southern Philippines might eventually secede from the Philippines as a last resort and join Malaysia, where they are wanted.

Anni said this could happen if Marcos is unable to use his powers to stop killings and landgrabbing between Christians and Moslems.

Marcos visited Zamboanga Thursday to review the situation. He ordered his military and security leaders to take all steps necessary to put a halt to raids by armed Ilaga bands and to do their best to stop strife between Christians and Moslems.

The presence of Malaysian-trained infiltrators in the southern Philippines can be traced back to 1965. The Malaysians were said to have opened five training camps for infiltrators in Sabah, northern Borneo after the Philippines claimed Sabah which is part of Malaysia.

Although the ensuing controversy over Sabah has now quieted down, the Philippine government has never dropped its claim to Sabah and the Malaysians have never closed the training camps, say well informed sources.

Sulu Archipelago — traditional seat of the Moslem royalty in the Philippines — has never been under effective government or foreign rule. The Spanish and American colonizers never succeeded in controlling the Moslems of Sulu and Moslem leaders have always regarded themselves as independent of the central government in Manila.

Parke Davis Has 'Synthetic Skin' For Burn Care

New York (AP) — Parke, Davis & Co. announced development of a new "synthetic skin" for the treatment of second and third degree burns.

The skin, which combines a porous film similar to Teflon and a polyurethane foam mesh, which allows air and moisture to pass through to the burned area, but not liquids or bacteria, the firm said.

Parke, Davis said the product should be commercially available in limited quantities by fall, with full production by early next year.

Mayor Fires Zealous Chief

Tripoli, Iowa (UPI) — Tripoli Mayor George Barnes fired Police Chief Don Razloff, climaxing a two-week battle between the two after the mayor ordered Razloff to quit writing speeding tickets.

Barnes, who said he had the backing of the city council in this town of 1,300, said he fired the chief because he had received "a lot of complaints" from townspeople who received speeding tickets.

Razloff refused to quit issuing citations, however, claiming that the mayor was trying to keep him from "enforcing the law."

N-Sub Completes Trial

Vallejo, Calif. (UPI) — The nuclear attack submarine Guitarro successfully completed its first sea trials off the coast of California.

Herds Of Gnus Are Plentiful

Chicago (UPI) — News note: no shortage of gnus.

Herds of those large African antelopes which have delighted generations of crossword puzzle addicts and punsters are, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, in reasonable abundance from Aululand to Kenya.

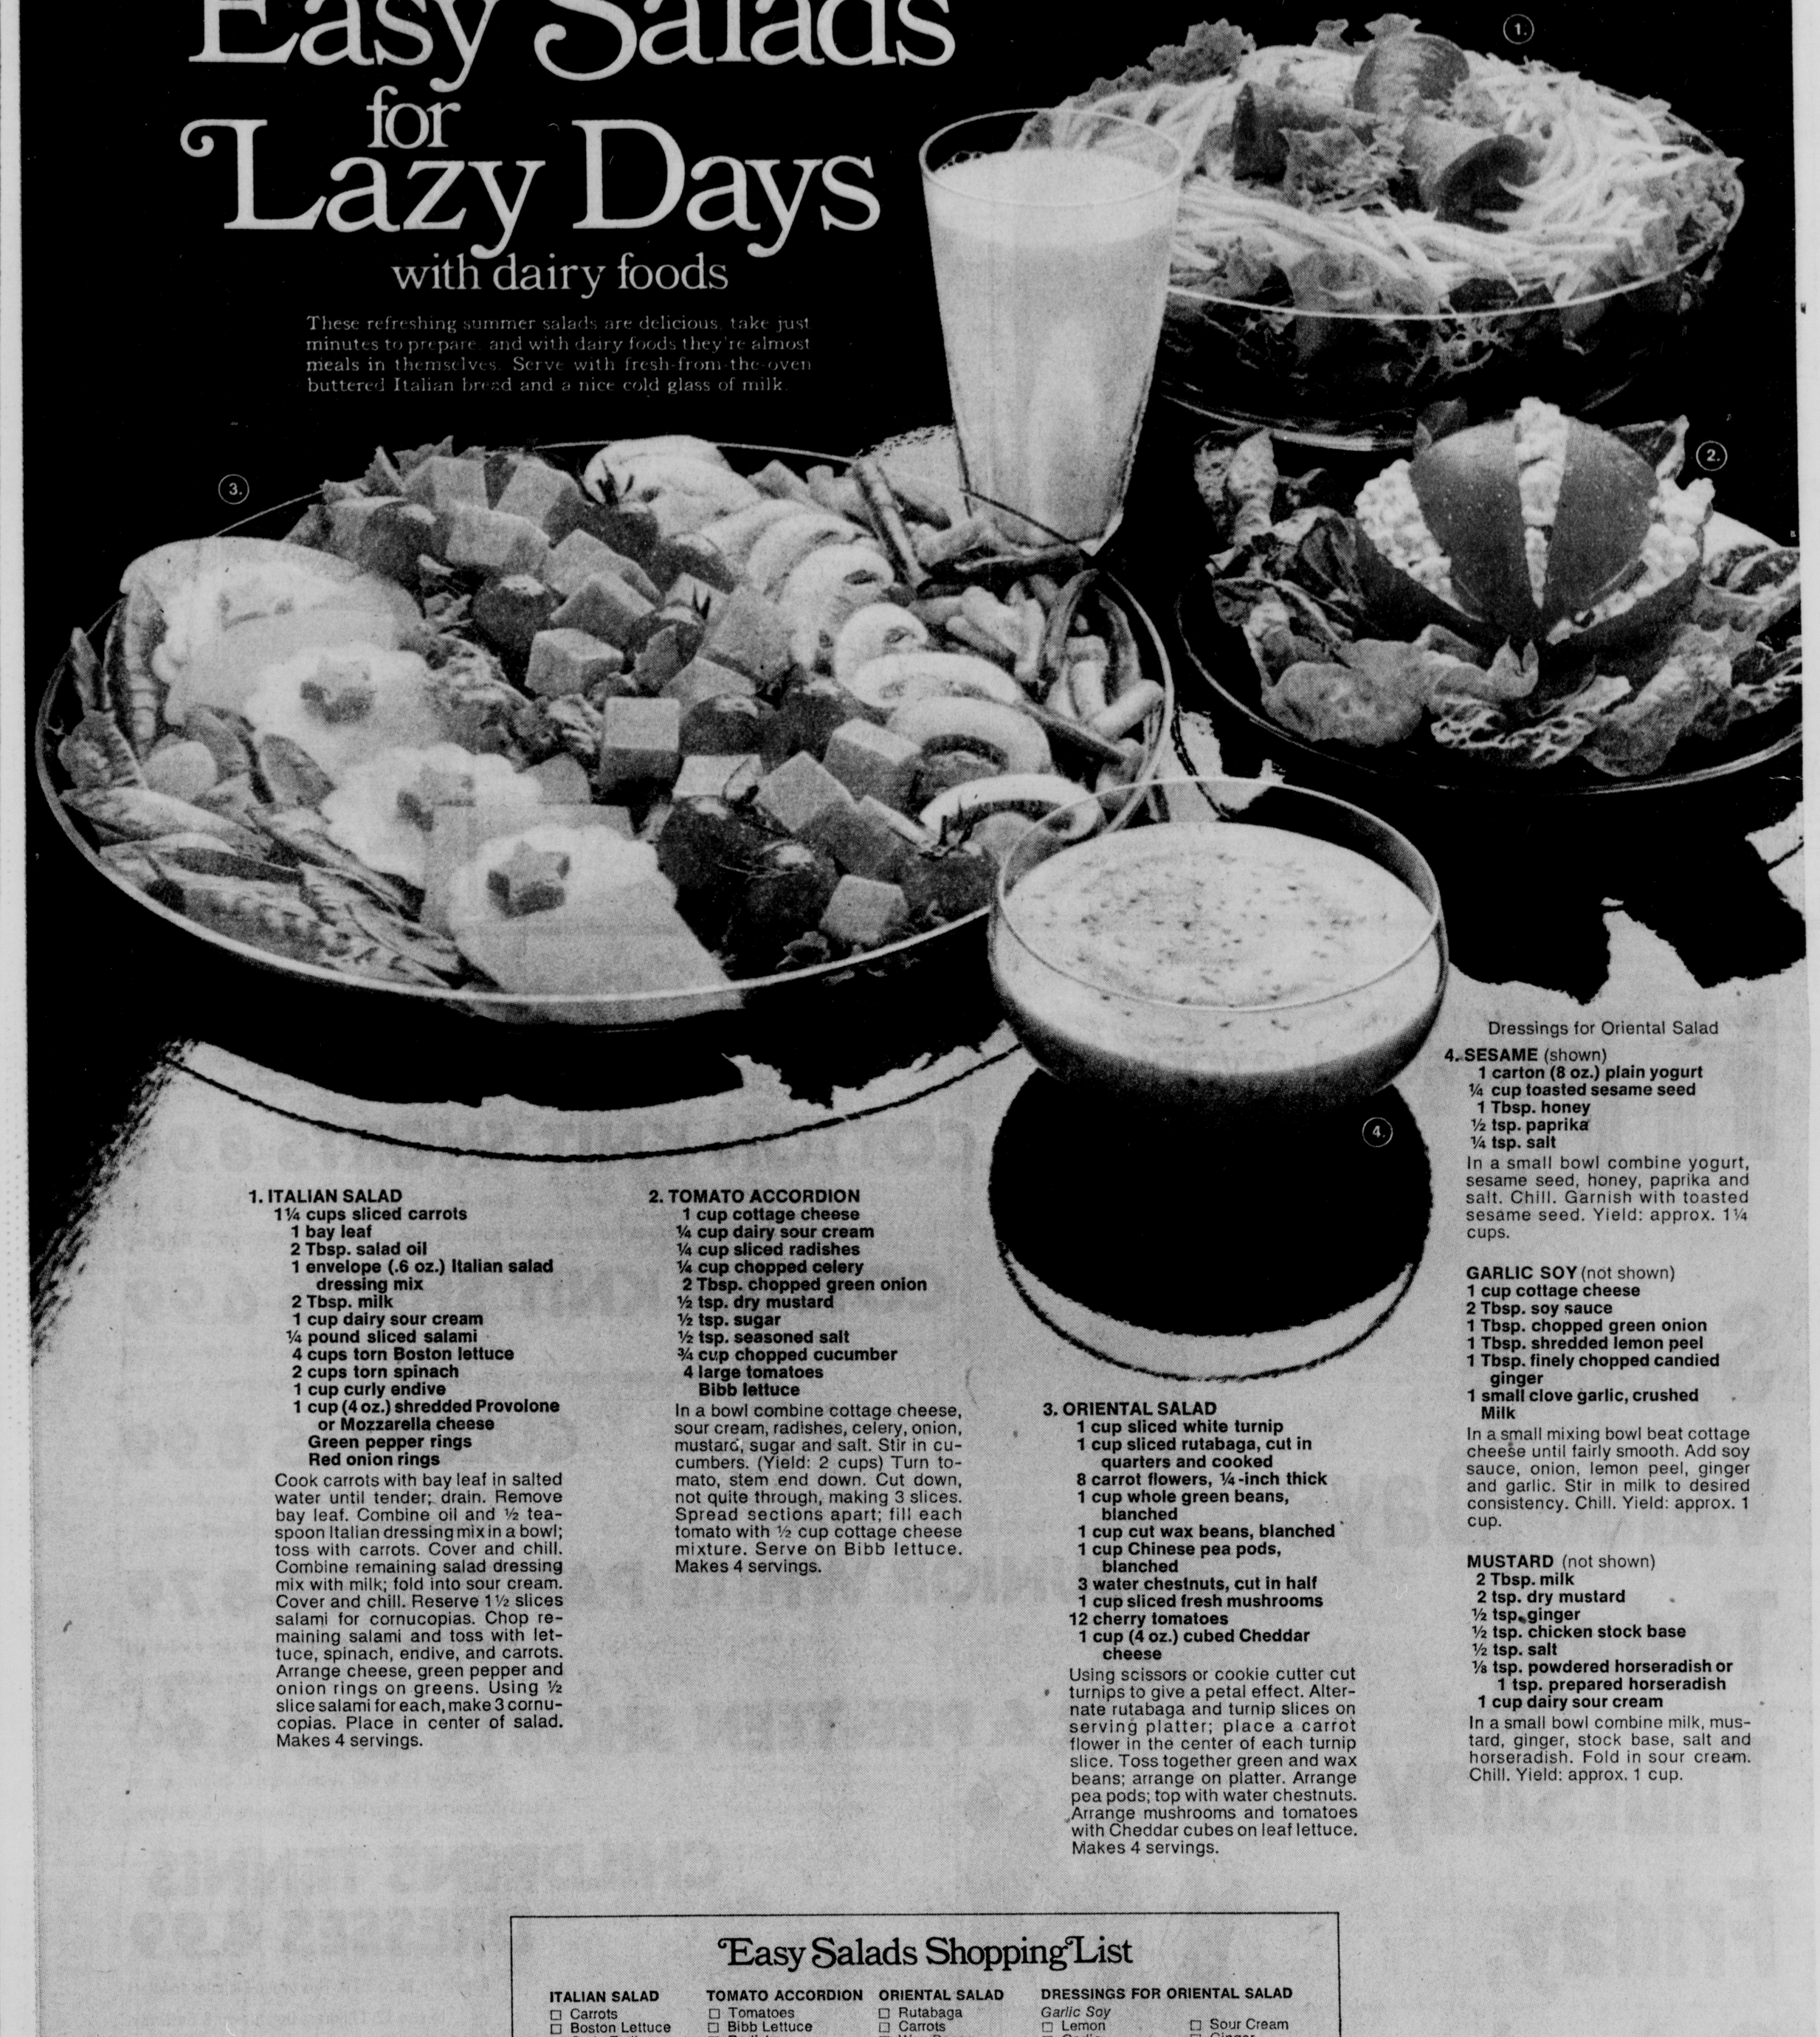
Easy Salads for Lazy Days

with dairy foods

These refreshing summer salads are delicious, take just minutes to prepare, and with dairy foods they're almost meals in themselves. Serve with fresh-from-the-oven buttered Italian bread and a nice cold glass of milk.



1. ITALIAN SALAD

1¼ cups sliced carrots
1 bay leaf
2 Tbsp. salad oil
1 envelope (.6 oz.) Italian salad dressing mix
2 Tbsp. milk
1 cup dairy sour cream
¼ pound sliced salami
4 cups torn Boston lettuce
2 cups torn spinach
1 cup curly endive
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Provolone or Mozzarella cheese
Green pepper rings
Red onion rings

Cook carrots with bay leaf in salted water until tender; drain. Remove bay leaf. Combine oil and ½ teaspoon Italian dressing mix in a bowl; toss with carrots. Cover and chill. Combine remaining salad dressing mix with milk; fold into sour cream. Cover and chill. Reserve 1½ slices salami for cornucopias. Chop remaining salami and toss with lettuce, spinach, endive, and carrots. Arrange cheese, green pepper and onion rings on greens. Using ½ slice salami for each, make 3 cornucopias. Place in center of salad. Makes 4 servings.

2. TOMATO ACCORDION

1 cup cottage cheese
¼ cup dairy sour cream
¼ cup sliced radishes
¼ cup chopped celery
2 Tbsp. chopped green onion
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. sugar
½ tsp. seasoned salt
¾ cup chopped cucumber
4 large tomatoes
Bibb lettuce

In a bowl combine cottage cheese, sour cream, radishes, celery, onion, mustard, sugar and salt. Stir in cucumbers. (Yield: 2 cups) Turn tomato, stem end down. Cut down, not quite through, making 3 slices. Spread sections apart; fill each tomato with ½ cup cottage cheese mixture. Serve on Bibb lettuce. Makes 4 servings.

3. ORIENTAL SALAD

1 cup sliced white turnip
1 cup sliced rutabaga, cut in quarters and cooked
8 carrot flowers, ¼-inch thick
1 cup whole green beans, blanched
1 cup cut wax beans, blanched
1 cup Chinese pea pods, blanched
3 water chestnuts, cut in half
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
12 cherry tomatoes
1 cup (4 oz.) cubed Cheddar cheese

Using scissors or cookie cutter cut turnips to give a petal effect. Alternate rutabaga and turnip slices on serving platter; place a carrot flower in the center of each turnip slice. Toss together green and wax beans; arrange on platter. Arrange pea pods; top with water chestnuts. Arrange mushrooms and tomatoes with Cheddar cubes on leaf lettuce. Makes 4 servings.

Party Honors August Bride-Elect

Before too many days the month of June will have disappeared from various and sundry calendars, and July will make its entrance in a most spectacular fashion.

And looming up on the social calendar, bridal-wise, is August which, come to think of it, is just around the corner.

So, those August brides-elect seem to be taking the center of the stage when it comes to prenuptial courtesies.

One of those August brides-elect is Miss Betty Jane Misle, whose marriage to Jeffrey Mellen will take place on Sunday, Aug. 6, and last Saturday Miss Misle was honored at a luncheon for which her two aunts, Mrs. Abram Misle, and Mrs. Henry Misle, and her grandmother, Mrs. Ben Misle, were hostesses at the Nebraska Club.

We Hear That

A number of out-of-state visitors will be in Lincoln this weekend to attend the Saturday morning marriage of Miss Martha Modena Gant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln Gant, to Robert Henry Bowden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy H. Bowden of Morristown, N.J. Arriving for the ceremony will be Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smith of Little Rock, Ark., Mrs. Charles W. Bundy of Charlotte, N.C., Miss Elizabeth Lewis and Miss Modena Lewis, both of Dallas, N.C. On Friday evening, June 30, they will be among those in attendance at a prenuptial dinner which will take place at the Radisson-Cornhusker Hotel in honor of Miss Gant and Mr. Bowden. The bridegroom-elect's parents will serve as host and hostess for the event.

Trends In Furniture

Balancing a flair for the present with a sense of the past is a two-century-old American tradition.

Dating back to pioneer days when European treasures were juxtaposed with handcrafted furnishings in frontier homes, Americans have always demonstrated a talent for innovative decorating. Ingenious multi-use of space and effortless mixing of old and new are historic traditions in the American home.

Today the decorating scene reflects an added dimension: a penchant for carefree living and nonchalant entertaining. The lifestyle of the 70's demands a new breed of furniture—tempered by tradition but designed for today's casual living. Many furniture industries show collections of living room, dining room and occasional furniture which interprets these contemporary needs in designs that span the centuries, from 1500 B.C. to the present.

Strong motifs from ages past—cross-framed doors used by 17th century French, English and Colonial cabinet makers, late 18th and 19th century campaign styles and a 3500-year-old "T" square table—find new relevance.

Keyed to today's tastes, the collections avoid yesteryear's deep mahoganies. Instead, less formal woods, such as solid ash, knotty oak veneers and olive ash burl are used and are distressed for an aged look and extra wearability. The predominant finish is a warm medium brown called "Weathermark". A darker "Cloister" finish and a glazed tortoise used on accent pieces complete the trio of finishes. All three mix, match and complement today's glass, cast aluminum and wrought iron which are also incorporated into the versatile collection.

Know Your Antiques

The hanging cigar and startled look added to the eye appeal of these advertising nodders. The heads and arms are suspended on wire bars so they will move at the slightest breeze.

By RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

Moving advertisements were eye catcher long before the television set and its films. Books and papers could show an item, but it was motion that caught the eye.

Nodders were originally made to catch the eye of the religious pilgrim in China. Porcelain figures or pagodas were made with heads suspended on metal bars. The slightest wind would make the god nod in agreement.

Nodders were made in Europe during the late 18th and 19th century. Papier-mache toy nodders can still be found at fairs.

An English typewriter firm of the early 1900s made a pair of advertising figures that typed and nodded. They made eye catching window displays. These bisque figures show both a man and a woman pounding the keys.

Q. My mother recently died in a small Midwestern town. The house was full of things which are of an unknown value. I am not an antique buff and I realize that one does not acquire this knowledge overnight. I want to sell the things for the best price. What do you suggest?

A. Disposing of an estate with antiques is always a problem. There are specual solutions for special estates. Location is the first consideration. Is the house located near many antique dealers? Is there an auctioneer in the area who normally sells antiques? Can an auction be held at the house with sufficient area for parking cars and holding crowds of people? Is the house filled with fine antiques or just with a few antiques and much used furniture?

Go over the contents with a friend who has some knowledge of antiques. If the house is filled with expensive antique glass, china or other early items dating before 1850, we suggest you go to the library and read some of the antique publications.

Locate an auctioneer who specializes in antiques. He will have a customer list that will bring the dealers and collectors from the neighboring states. If the house just has a few antiques, and much everyday furniture, a local auctioneer would be better because then the non-antiques will sell for more money.

If the house is near a good sized city, a house sale may be the answer. There are people in every city who run such sales for a percentage of the money collected. Ask in the area for the best house sale person and sell the entire contents in this manner.

If you have a house sale, be sure that no one is permitted inside before the sale to buy the items at a discount. Many collectors and dealers try to be the first inside every house sale looking for the "sleepers."

In some areas there are legal problems about disposing of estates. Some states require an auction. Some towns do not permit house sales. Be sure to check this with your attorney.

If a sale or auction is not possible because of location or time, you can always sell the antiques to any nearby antique dealer. Check with some antique loving friends to get an idea of the value of the pieces and call in some dealers. Remember a dealer must make a profit so he will not pay you the retail value.

After you have sold most of the contents of the home donate what is left to a local resale shop that is being run for a charitable organization. The tax deduction is often of value to an estate and you will be helping others at the same time.

A reader sent this tip for bottle collectors. The Heinz Company dropped the "H" on Pittsburgh from 1883 to 1906. This plus the way the initials H and J were used before the Heinz make it possible to date Heinz bottles.

Food For The Barbecue

It's that time of year again—barbecue time. It's that season when there are treks to parks, to a favorite river bank or, which is far more likely—a trip to your own patio—just outside the door. And whether the grill is portable or stationary really doesn't matter as long as there is good food and fun.

These spectacular "en brochette" servings are made with round steak. In place of the usual cubes, however, the steak is cut into thin strips.

Here's a tip for cutting round steak into trim, even slices. Place the steak in your freezer until partially frozen. Then remove from the freezer and immediately slice with a very sharp knife. For this recipe the strips should be sliced about ¼ inch wide.

The steak is threaded accordian-style on long metal skewers for hearty, tempting servings. Along with the beef are partially cooked carrots, zucchini and whole onions. As they cook, the kabobs are brushed with garlic flavored barbecue sauce.

BARBECUED ROUND STEAK EN BROCHETTE

2 pounds beef round steak, cut 1½ inches thick.
6 carrots, cut in 2-inch pieces
4 Zucchini, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 jar (16 ounces) whole onions garlic flavored barbecue sauce.
6 14-inch metal skewers

Chill or partially freeze round steak to make cutting easier. Slice steak into strips ¼ inch wide. Cook carrots until almost tender. Cook zucchini 2 minutes. Thread on four 14-inch metal skewers, strips of steak (accordion-style), 2 pieces carrot, 2 pieces zucchini and 2 onions. Thread remaining vegetables alternately on two 14-inch skewers. Grill or broil 4 inches from coals. Broil 3 to 4 minutes on each side. Brush with barbecue sauce, continue turning and brushing with barbecue sauce until broiled to desired doneness. 4 to 6 servings.

Dining with Wine

The outdoor barbecue, almost an American institution, provides the "man of the house" with an opportunity to display his prowess as "Chef de Cuisine", a title which he may earn very easily by taking a few tips from his wine merchant.

Since the items of food usually prepared in this manner are limited, it requires a considerable amount of ingenuity to provide attractive and palatable meals without having some member sniff the burning embers and remark: "Aw, why can't we go out next time"?

The best way to enhance the flavor of the food and please all of the guests every time is to serve wine with the meal. For no matter what you serve — wine belongs — both as a complement to the food and as a digestive aid. It is, in fact, a food in itself and should be so considered.

The most common items of food prepared on the outdoor grill are hamburgers and hot dogs. These very popular and most unsophisticated delicacies would be greatly enhanced by a glass of Beaujodais Chateau Boisfranc 1970 — a light, fragrant and charming red Rhone wine which may be served at a cost per serving below the price of the meat and just pennies more than a can of any carbonated beverage.

A barbecued chicken dinner can be turned into a banquet with a glass of a Chateau Bottled white Bordeaux such as Chateau Ferrande 1970. It is served chilled and is the perfect accompaniment to fowl.

For those who are able to afford lobster, shrimp or other seafood prepared over charcoal, there are many fine white wines such as Caves D'Arency Petit Chablis 1970, a dry, crisp white Burgundy made from the Pinot Chardonnay grape which is delightful — satisfying but not filling.

The outdoor cook who takes the time to prepare roasts or other cuts of beef can do wonders with a meal by adding a robust, hearty Burgundy such as Chateau Poitier Moulin-a-Vent 1969, or a fragrant, full-bodied red wine such as Clos Rene' 1969 — a Pomerol and a truly great wine which would bring out the best in the meat and compliments from the guests.

There are so many choices open to the host when it comes to selecting a wine because so many wines go with the small number of items usually prepared in outdoor cooking. In addition, every member of the family, from the youngest to the oldest, can enjoy wine. It is good for you and will do what no other beverage can do — it makes food taste better.

This is the time of the year when wine merchants usually offer real bargains in the less expensive wines. Anyone who can afford food can afford the most healthful of all foods — wine.

Bee Sting—Easy Cure

The buzz of the bumblebee, bee or wasp is a sound you'll want to stay away from this summer. According to Bob Roselle. Extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska the stings of bees and wasps can be most dangerous, especially if an individual has an allergic reaction. The only way to prevent stings is to avoid bees and wasps. If you are stung and if you notice continual swelling or evidence of shock, Roselle advises that you see a doctor immediately. One of the latest remedies for treating stings at home is one half teaspoon meat tenderizer in a teaspoon of water. Rub this on the sting as soon as possible. Cream and lotions may also give some pain relief.

Chit-Chat with Roxi

Dear Roxi:

My problem is my boyfriend. I don't know what to do with him anymore. He is pushing himself to extremes. We don't have any time together anymore and he acts like he doesn't care whether or not we do. He says he has to do this and that it doesn't make any difference how I feel. I don't know what to do.

A. Be patient. He is going through the pains of proving himself, not only to you but to himself. He has to obtain the self confidence he lacks in his own mind to succeed. It is all part of the old idea that still holds true — that in order to make it in this world, he must prove himself.

Dear Roxi:

I thought having a kid sister would be great. Well, it isn't. I don't hold it against her or anything but her presence is causing nothing but trouble. My parents haven't heard one word I've said since she arrived in the family. They ignore the fact I'm even around. They always wanted a girl and now they've got one. Well great, but what about me?

A. What about you? You're feeling sorry for yourself when likely you could be of some help to your parents in taking care of your sister. Offer to do something that not only helps but is a way of creating family unity. Everyone working together for a common goal. Try it, you'll like it.

Dear Roxi:

I'm going to be a senior in high school this fall and I have a big problem. I want to get my hair cut but if I do and I don't like the way it's cut, I'm in trouble. I must get my senior picture taken this fall. So if it looks terrible then what could I do?

A. It won't look terrible if you get it cut now and wait to have your picture taken in September. By that time it will have grown out and will look better. Be sure though if you do get it cut to make an appointment early to get your picture taken. That way you won't have to worry about anything.

Dear Roxi:

My father is a lawyer. Now that I am one year from graduation he has started telling me there will be a place in his law firm for me when I graduate from law school. I do not want to go into law. For dad, that's great. He enjoys it and that's what he wanted. It isn't what I want. What can I do?

A. Tell your dad that the field of law is a good one, but that you have other plans, which are better suited for you. Explain that you feel you are not the type for law and it would be better if you went into something you feel you'd be better at. No one in this world is alike. That's the great part — we are all individuals, all striving for something different. Don't let your dad dictate to you how to spend your life.

Dear Roxi:

My problem is my parents. I don't know what to do with them. They insist on watching "Gunsmoke". It's their favorite show and it doesn't make any difference whether I can't stand it or not. I wouldn't mind if they would share the television, but no that's out of the question. By the time they let me watch "Laugh. In" it will be off the air and "Gunsmoke" will be going strong. What can I do?

A. Share and share alike is the answer, but you said your parents said no. How did you approach them about your differences? Did you demand that they let you see your show? The right approach can make the end result entirely different. How you treat them is how they'll treat you and vise versa.

Dear Roxi:

I want to redecorate my room. My parents say it is out of the question. It doesn't need redecorating, they contend, so forget it. My room has been the same way since I was a kid. I am sick of it. How can I get them to reconsider?

A. Be objective. Give them some reasons for changing the room. Reasons that are sensible and realistic. Explain in full what your want to change and why. Don't go to extremes. A little at a time, accomplishes more than a lot in a hasty manner.

Do you have a proble mor question? If so, write Chit Chat with Roxi in care of the Lincoln Star.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

The question of when to draw trumps arises in the play of every suit contract. The general rule is that declarer draws trumps at once unless there is a good reason not to, but finding the good reason to draw or not to draw them is the vital factor that determines the outcome of many a contract.

For example, consider this deal where South wins the diamond lead with the ace and is faced with the question of whether to draw trumps.

Let's see what happens if he does. Since the trumps prove to be divided 4-1, he must play four rounds of them, after which his best play is to lead a club. East wins and returns a diamond, which declarer ruffs. Another club lead produces another diamond return, and, when South ruffs it, he is fresh out of trumps.

South can now do no better than cash the A-K of hearts, and he finishes down one.

Now let's go back to trick two and have South lead a club instead of drawing trumps. The plan is to build up a club trick before extracting trumps. Assume East wins the club and returns a diamond, whereupon South ruffs and plays another club. The defense wins the club and again returns a diamond. Declarer ruffs and leads the third round of clubs, taken by West.

The wisdom of delaying the extraction of trumps is now apparent. Another diamond lead from West would be ineffective, since declarer could ruff in dummy, draw trumps and claim the balance, while any other return from West would prove equally ineffective.

The great advantage of the farsighted club play at trick two is that it guards against a 4-1 trump division.

Abby: faith well justified

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you from the State Penitentiary in Huntsville, Tex., where I have been locked up for two years. I have three more to serve and here is my problem:

Three months before I got locked up and sent here I met a very lovely young lady. She is 27 and I am 29. She works in the daytime and goes to school three nights a week. She is a "lady of the evening" but that doesn't interfere with her love for me. She writes to me faithfully and says she loves me and will wait for me. She is loyal and true, Miss Abby, and I think about her all the time.

Should I put all my faith and trust in this woman? I believe I really love her. I need your advice and opinion.

VERY TRULY YOURS,
"278946" (Not my real number)

DEAR "TWO": If she has stuck by you, writes faithfully and promises to wait for you, I'd say your faith in her is well justified. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter signed "Troubled Daughter" in which two brothers refused to share with three sisters the responsibility of caring for their elderly mother.

Did you know that in the State of California only sons are responsible (money-wise) for an aged parent who is on welfare, unless the daughter works or has an outside income, regardless of how large her husband's income is?

My husband (an only son) pays over $100 a month to the California Public Welfare office while his three married sisters pay nothing, as they are not employed outside the home.

Our attorney advised us that it is unconstitutional to discriminate against the sexes, but Kings County Department of Public Welfare threatened to take us to court if we don't reimburse them $109 per month.

UNLUCKY TO BE LIVING IN CALIF.

DEAR UNLUCKY: Your letter (accompanied by valid documentation) was a surprise to me. Does anyone out there have an ace to beat that King?

DEAR ABBY: This is for "YOUR HUSBAND'S MISTRESS," who ends up with, "What good is the status of being a legal wife when all your friends know that your husband is in love with another woman?"

I would like to know since when is love equated with sexual satisfaction? If that man really loved you, he'd have married you first and had his sex later.

Wake up, Sister. You're being used!

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest, Abby.

WHAT IS A "CUSTOM-FITTED" HEARING AID?

Individuals with a hearing problem vary greatly. One may have good hearing in a certain range or pitch, but almost no hearing in other ranges. A hearing aid that is "custom fitted" should be tailored to suit the hearing defects of an individual wearer . . . ideally, a hearing aid will raise the intensities of the sounds that are poorly heard, while it leaves unchanged the intensities of the sounds being well heard.
The new amazing MAICO MARK 100 can be fitted to a large percent of the hard-of-hearing public. We believe it will offer the most dramatic hearing improvement they have ever known.

Public Works Allocations Include Funding For Nebraska Projects

Washington (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee added $7.5 million Tuesday to the construction money for the Harry S. Truman Dam and Reservoir, providing $27 million compared to $19.5 million voted by the House.

In another Missouri increase, the Senate committee approved $4.5 million for land acquisition for the Little Blue River Lakes. The House bill contained $2.5 million.

The Senate committee also restored a $3 million budgeted item which the House had cut, to relocate the flood-threatened Nebraska town of Niobrara.

The House had eliminted the money pending a required increase in the authorization from $7.8 million to $11.5 million.

The town faces flooding problems connected with the Gavins Point Dam.

The only South Dakota public works project changed from the House bill was a provision of $400,000 construction money for the Big Bend Dam-Lake Sharpe project. None had been provided by the House.

In Kansas, the only change was a $50,000 item to plan for chloride control in El Dorado. No money was included for this in the House bill.

The Senate committee also concurred in House action which provided the budgeted $2.5 million for Meramec Park Lake in Missouri, plus $500,000 to initiate construction.

"The committee feels that in order to derive maximum benefits from this project, consideration should be given by local authorities to the development of a comprehensive regional plan for the lands use of the area," the report said.

The committee also recommended a few increases in Bureau of Reclamation projects affecting Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota. Dakota.

It voted a $50,000 increase for the Frenchman Valley project in Nebraska, $55,000 more for the Dickinson Unit of the M&I Water project in North Dakota and $1 million more for the Atmospheric Water Resources Management Program.

School Lunch Price Hike To Be Discussed By Board Of Education

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday agreed to meet informally next week to discuss, among other budget items, whether it should increase school lunch prices for the coming year.

In preliminary budget work, the board was told, the district's business affairs office has projected a deficit in school lunch operations related to full-price meals.

No deficit is foreseen in that portion of the budget which includes free or reduced-price lunches.

Relative small amounts of money have been earmarked in the past two years to provide a subsidy for potential problems in the free and reduced-price categories, but increased federal subsidies have made those local budget items unnecessary.

This year, however, the board was told that with increased food prices and other inflationary costs the paid-lunch program may not be self-sustaining at present prices.

The business affairs office has suggested a $150,000 item to subsidize that budget.

Supt. John Prasch said the board should consider whether it wants to subsidize the prices of lunches for those students who have been paying the full set price, which is also boosted by some federal case subsidies and food commodities.

Another alternative, said Prasch, would be to raise the cost to students during the year if that appears necessary.

Or, he suggested, the board might want to budget an amount smaller than the $150,000 and remain open to some increase in lunch prices during the year.

He suggested the board deal with the question at an informal meeting next week so that the district can stay on its schedule for finalizing the 1972-73 budget figures.

The board decided to hold that meeting at 8 a.m. Wednesday, when it will also discuss other budgetary matters.

On another matter, the board approved wage settlements with two groups of employes.

The agreements call for a salary increase of 7% for teacher aides and 5.5% in salary and fringe benefits for clerical workers.

Added costs to the district were set at $19,064 to fund the increases for aides and $39,687 for the raises and additional benefits for secretaries.

The board also adopted a policy statement on "communicating with news media" to meet requirements of a new open meetings law set to go into effect soon.

The new policy stipulates that notices of meetings and agenda items will be delivered to the media at the same time they are delivered to school board members.

The board also:

— reviewed an evaluation report on operations of the Lincoln Individual Needs Learning Center.

— agreed to study alternatives for meeting provisions of a new law on educational service units. Lincoln is not presently an ESU member.

— declared surplus a school site in Salt Valley View.

— was handed a statement from high school principals; who said they planned no major changes in time schedules as they move to permit studens to leave the campuses at lunch time.

— agreed to purchase, as one of three new school buses, a transit-style bus which, although more expensive, is expected to last longer and provide safer transportation.

Lawsuit Filed In '68 Mishap

Broken Bow (AP) — A suit was filed Friday in Custer County District Court seeking $151,151 as a result of a 1968 accident which allegedly claimed the life of a six-year-old youth.

The petition was filed by David Copp, 11, through his father, Gerald Copp, both of Dunning.

The petition claimed Gary Steggs of Broken Bow and the Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co. of Lincoln were negligent in the sale of an empty barrel which allegedly had contained a drug called parathion.

According to the suit, the barrel was purchased from Steggs, who operates a flying service in Broken Bow, by B. F. Milleson of Dunning.

The suit said that later Bryon Milleson, Kurt Saner and young Copp, all six years old at the time, filled the barrel with water and played in it.

As a result of the remaining residue in the barrel, the petition said, all three were hospitalized, with young Milleson allegedly dying from the drug's effects.

Tech College Plan Direction Sought

The Lincoln Technical College Board Tuesday decided to seek a meeting this summer with area legislators to discuss the future of the local college in the state plan for technical community colleges.

Current board policy says the college will neither seek to expand its boundaries nor oppose such a move, and adds it believes such a decision should be left up to the Legislature.

The law which set up the state plan provided for ways to set technical college areas across the state and said uncommitted counties or portions of counties would be assigned to districts by the 1973 Unicameral.

The Lincoln district's boundaries are identical to Lincoln School District boundaries, and the same board serves both the school district and the technical college.

Lincoln Schod Supt. John Prasch, who also serves as chief officer of the tech college, said the board should consider whether it should discourage any legislative attempts to assign it to a larger area.

Prasch said he believes advantages of a larger district include acquiring a larger tax base, providing easy transition to a separate board which could devote full-time to tech college matters and putting Lincoln into a larger service area.

On the other hand, he said, there are advantages to planning kindergarten-through-grade-12 programs and two-year college programs in the same board setting, and he said a college serving a less cohesive area might meet more difficulties.

"In some ways," he said, "this comes down to whether this board wants to divest itself of the technical college."

In other matters, Tech College Director James Lightbody said proration of funds provided tech colleges under LB216 will result in a loss of nearly $33,000 in anticipated funds for the Lincoln school.

An attorney general's opinion altered the amounts the Legislature had projected for the several tech colleges in the state, and Lincoln and Central Nebraska Technical College in Hastings will receive less than expected.

The Lincoln board decided to refer the whole matter to the state technical college board for review.

The board also approved a new program which will include a move of auto mechanics courses and an expansion into auto body work courses for the Manpower Skill Center.

While other Manpower courses will not be affected, the new arrangement will put the two programs into a former car dealer building on the southwest corner of 14th and M.

Under the arrangement, the Manpower students will provide engine tune-up and some repair work for state motor vehicles under the jurisdiction of the Department of Administrative Services.

DAS will remodel the building to suit the educational program pay rental and utility costs and pay the tech college $1,000 a month to partially offset the program's costs.

Also approved was next year's program for continuation of the colleges' adult basic education courses.

Omaha Units Say Frontier Is Too Weak

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Airport Authority and the Omaha Chamber of Commerce declared Tuesday that they regard Frontier Airlines as "obviously to weak" to "compete effectively" with United Air Lines between Omaha and Chicago.

The Omaha agencies urged that the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) authorize American Airlines to serve the Omaha-Chicago market and to operate between Omaha and the East and West Coasts.

In a brief filed with the CAB, the two agencies asked for an immediate final decision in the Omaha-Des Moines air route case, which, the document said, has a history of "almost unbelievable delay."

The statement was submitted in response to a request by Frontier for permission to keep its Omaha-Chicago flights grounded until Aug. 1, 1973.

The CAB order giving Frontier authority to suspend the service between Eppley Airfield and Chicago's Midway Airport expires at the end of July.

Frontier asked for a further suspension on grounds it would continue to lose money if it is required to operate between the two cities.

The Omaha agencies said that under CAB standards, there is sufficient traffic in the Omaha-Chicago market "to support not just two carriers, but even three-carrier competition." United now flies the route exclusively.

The brief said "Frontier's request for an additional year's suspension makes it extremely clear that the problem of providing effective competitive service in the Omaha-Chicago market will not be remedied simply by granting Frontier a short period of breathing time in which to reverse its economic fortunes.

Frontier's record in that market, the authority and Frontier "has manifestly been one of dismal failure" and Frontier "hasmanifestly beeen unable to provide the full pattern of first competitive service for which it was certified."

Vreeland Award Winner Receives Columbia Stipend

The winner of a 1972 Vreeland Award for creativity at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Debra Hulbert of Lincoln, has been awarded a $1,000 scholarship to Columbia University Writing Program.

Debra, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hulbert, graduated from NU in May with a major in English. She was awarded the Vreeland award for her poetry writing and a play. She is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, arts and sciences honorary.

She is an editorial assistant of Prairie Schooner, literary quarterly, and poetry editor of Saltillo, a magazine published by Blue Stem Press.

Police Probing Home Burglary

Lincoln police are investigating a burglary at the Clarence Parker residence at 829 No. 30th late Monday night or early Tuesday morning in which several articles valued at over $450 were taken.

Police said entrance to the home was gained by pushing in a screen and unlocking the door. A television, radio, stereo and several articles of clothing were reported missing.

Tools Parts Stolen

Several tools and motorcycle parts valued at $250 were taken sometime early Tuesday morning from a van belonging to Edwin Oahm of 3636 Vine, according to police reports.

Triple Crowns Evasive

Another Triple Crown series in thoroughbred racing has passed and for the 24th consecutive year, it has passed without a winner.

Not since Citation in 1948 has a 3-year-old managed to win the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont and this puts racing's Triple Crown in about the same category as that of golf's grand slam in evasiveness.

But the reasons may be a bit different. You don't see Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino or any of the other top names of golf through the years passing up America's Triple Crown of golf — the PGA, Masters and U.S. Open — save for the couple of years Trevino boycotted the Masters.

Top Horses Bypass Derby

The same cannot be said for racing's Triple Crown series.

Of the top 24 all-time leading money winning thoroughbreds, only 10 ever went to the post in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs and only three of that 10 came away with the roses draped around his neck.

Kelso, the all-time leading money winner with earnings of $1,977,896, for instance, is one who never tried to win the Derby.

You have to go down to Carry Back, No. 5 on the money winnings list, to find a Kentucky Derby winner. He won in 1961, the last Derby winner to make the top 24 on the money winning chart.

Other Derby winners on the chart are Citation, No. 8, and Swaps, the 1955 winner, who ranks 16th in the matching of bank accounts.

Others whose bank statements list them in the top 24 with their Derby year and Derby finish are Round Table, 1957, 3rd; Nashua, 1955, 2nd; Damascus, 1967, 3rd; Roman Brother, 1964, 4th; Sword Dancer, 1959, 2nd; Candy Spots, 1963, 3rd; and Crimson Satan, 1962, 6th.

Cheap Horses In Derby

Another criteria on which the Derby might be judged is the worthiness of many of its recent starters to even be in the starting gate.

This year's Derby included 10, who hadn't won even $10,000 as 2-year-olds and six of those had failed to win even $5,000 in their rookie year. Two hadn't won a dime.

While this year's Kentucky Derby was being run, there were eight 3-year-olds in their stalls at Ak-Sar-Ben, who had won more money as 2-year-olds than had 10 of the Derby starters.

Ak-Sar-Ben 3-year-olds with more in their bank accounts last Jan. 1 than 10 of the Derby starters were Excello $12,740, Aye Jay Aye $27,682, Hunting Cap $12,850, Italian Ruler $54,665, Mr. Exit $11,949, Flying Drifter $29,173, British Fleet $31,603 and Royal Duce $11,490.

And Saigon Warrior, a 1971 Derby starter, finished last in an Ak-Sar-Ben claiming race in his last outing this season.

Another example that the fabled Derby might not be attracting the nation's best 3-year-olds is the Experimental Handicap, the hypothetical weight assignment chart released each spring on the top 3-year-olds.

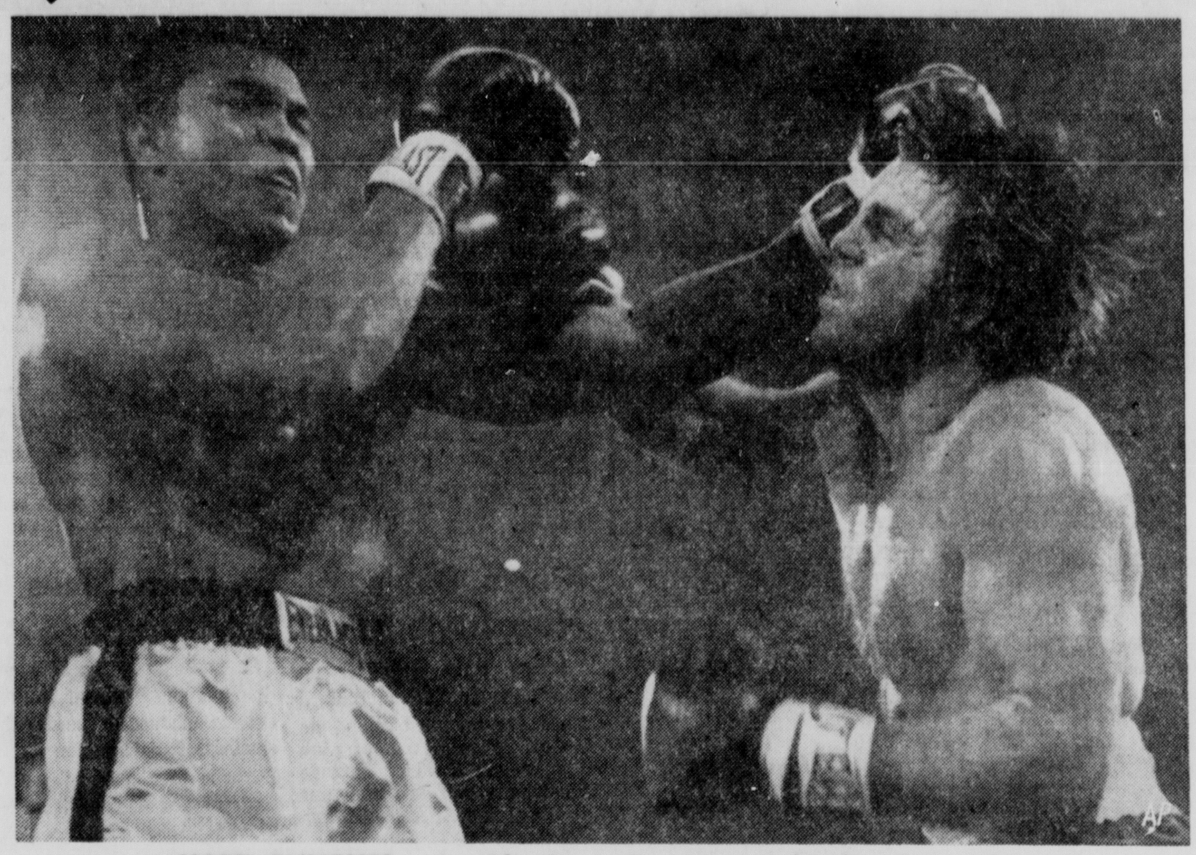
Of the 111 listed on this year's Experimental Handicap chart, only four showed up at the Derby starting gate.

Riva Ridge, the Derby winner, was top-weighted in the Experimental Chart at 126 pounds. Runner-up No Le Hace was assigned 111 pounds and third place finisher Hold Your Peace drew 118 pounds in the Experimental.

The only other Derby starter to appear on the Experimental Chart last spring was Freetex at 121 pounds. Freetex was sixth in the Derby.

The Kentucky Derby may be the most prestigious of all thoroughbred races, but you couldn't tell it by the response of the thoroughbred owners and trainers.

QUARRY DUO LOSES FIGHTS



HARD PUNCHES . . . Ali, Jerry Quarry winch after being hit.

Ali, Foster Win With TKO, KO

. . . MIKE, JERRY STOPPED

Las Vegas, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali and Bob Foster stopped the Brothers Quarry in impressively powerful style at the Las Vegas Convention Center Tuesday night and immediately came the suggestion of matching the two winners. Foster, the light-heavyweight champion, slammed home a three-punch combination at the bell ending the fourth round and young challenger Mike Quarry went down flat.

He stayed on his back about three minutes and said afterward: "That's by far the hardest I've ever been hit."

Ali came in against Jerry Quarry in the heavyweight bout between the two top contenders. Referee Mike Kaplan called a halt to that bout after 19 seconds of the seventh round with Jerry taking a shellacking.

"I just couldn't get out of the way," admitted the elder Quarry.

Ali said it "wasn't as easy as it looked," and instantly resumed his demand for another heavyweight title fight, saying: "Frazier is ducking me at his chicken farm."

Foster immediately brought up the hope that he could meet Ali "'cause that's where the money is."

Billed as "The Soul Brothers" at their mutual training camp at plush Caesar's Palace, the two had already discussed the possibility.

The Tuesday night bouts drew a record Nevada gate of $349,800 on 6,549 paid admissions. They saw Mike Quarry, a game contender, against Foster until the stunning knockout climax. But his older brother was a beaten man well before the referee called a halt to that bout.

From the fourth round on, the big question seemed to be just when the end would come.

The game 27-year-old Quarry, from Cypress, Calif., had slugged the ex-heavyweight champion with lefts and rights to the body early in the fight but failed to slow him.

Ali, 30, from Cherry Hill, N.J., began moving in after jabbing in the fourth round and also used frequent right uppercuts to slow his charging foe.

By the fifth round, Jerry lacked steam in his punches and, at times, Ali landed four and five shots at a clip.

It was the same in the sixth, with Quarry, the No. 2 challenger behind Ali for Joe Frazier's heavyweight crown, bruised under both eyes, taking punches and swinging wildly.

Ali, weighing 216½ to 198 for his opponent, scored his third victory of the year but his first in which he stopped his foe. Under Nevada rules, it was scored as a technical knockout.

Ali collected $500,000 and Quarry $200,000. The ex-champion also maintained his momentum toward a return bout against Frazier, the only man to beat him.

"I definitely could have gone on," Jerry Quarry said after the bout, "but it wouldn't do any good. My brother's fight took it all out of me."

The elder Quarry was never knocked down in his fight. Ali's record rose to 37-1 with his 28th kayo. Jerry Quarry is 39-6 with four draws.

After the heavyweight bout, fights broke out among the crowd, one of them involving Mike Quarry. It took police several minutes to halt the altercations.

The fights were carried internationally by closed-circuit television and publicized as "The Soul Brothers vs. The Quarry Brothers."

Foster, 173½, from Albuquerque, N.M., has led through the early rounds but the ending came with a shock as he bombed out his foe and successfully defended his crown for the 10th time in the scheduled 15-round bout.

Quarry, 175, from Anaheim, Calif., had used a strategy of trying to stay away from the champ or moving inside to negate the 33-year-old Foster's reach.

Quarry, 21, lay prone on his back for fully three minutes before his seconds revived him.

Foster earned $80,000 for his title defense before the crowd of about 7,000 while Mike Quarry, winner of all of his 36 previous professional bouts, drew $45,000.

From the start, it was obvious that Foster hit harder. But young Mike landed some good left hooks in the first round.

Foster relied mainly on his jab in the opening minutes and had reddened the challenger's face before the end of the first round.

Mike's eyes were blinking as he came out for the second round. At one point, he hit as referee Harry Krause attempted to break them apart. Foster hollered and then fired a quick right to Quarry's jaw.

Foster, the sheriff's deputy from Albuquerque, N.M. pounded some solid rights to the head of Quarry in the third round but Mike shook off their effect.

In the fourth round, the fight followed the same pattern with Foster landing the harder blows. The knockout came just at the bell and the count continued into the intermission under Nevada rules—but that would have made no difference. Quarry was out cold and the time between rounds could not have saved him.

For Foster, the 6-1 favorite, it was his 41st knockout and his 48th victory in 53 fights, against five losses. He won the title by knocking out Dick Tiger in May 1968 and has defended 10 times.

Under Nevada rules, the knockout will go into the books at 3:10 of the fourth round.

Smith Advances At Wimbledon Meet

. . . RAIN DELAYS EVERT'S DEBUT IN 12-DAY TOURNEY

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)-Rain, the curse of an English summer, delayed Chris Evert's debut at the 86th Wimbledon lawn tennis championships Tuesday but it stayed off long enough for top-seeded Stan Smith to advance to the third round of the men's singles.

Miss Evert, a 17-year-old from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. who is unbeaten since her arrival in England just over two weeks ago, was due to have met Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego in the third match on No. 1 court—scene of Chris' two victories in the Wightman Cup.

But with the match between fourth seeded Andres Gimeno of Spain and unseeded New Zealander Onny Parun going into the fifth set, Miss Evert was left to chew her nails in the locker room.

Just as she was beginning to warm up, the rains came. The covers were placed on court, removed and then applied again and by then her chance of playing had vanished into the night.

Smith,from Pasadena, Calif., was well below the form which took him to the final against John Newcombe last year. His strength of shot eventually got him home, 6-4, 9-8, 6-3 against David Irvine of Rhodesia.

Defending women's champion Evonne Goolagong of Australia also advanced to the third round with a routine 42-minute victory over New Zealand's Maralyn Pryde.

Smith was unable to return service and made unforced errors galore. He looked uninterested against an opponent who handled his big service well and scrambled nearly everything back.

Smith won the second set tiebreak, 7 points to 5, when the Rhodesian served a doublefault. He broke service for 5-3 in the third with the aid of a blistering forehand and then served out the match.

Afterwards Smith, as honest as ever, said: "I went on court in a careless frame of mind and never got rid of it throughout the match.

"He (Irvine) doesn't have a big service but, taking it too easy, I just did not handle it well.

"I was just plain sloppy."

Parun, a 25-year-old New Zealander, appeared headed for a straight set upset of Gimeno, the fourth seed, but he failed in the clutch.

He had a match point in the 10th game of the third set and lost it on a volleying error, then dropped his service in the 14th by serving two doublefaults.

Parun again served for the match in the 10th game of the fourth and blew a 40-15 lead. Gimeno then won the tiebreak, 7 points to 5, to level at two sets all and they were 3-3 in the decider when the rain came.

The rain means the program is running slightly behind schedule with three first round men's singles matches still to be completed.

America's 24 males however, completed opening round matches with 16 going through. Winning were : Roscoe Tanner, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-3, 26, 6-4, 7-9, 7-5 over Juan Velasco of Colombia, Richard Stockton, Port Washington, N.Y. 8-9, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 over Tomas Koch of Brazil; Erik Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., 7-5, 8-6, 6-1 over Sherwood Stewart of Baytown, Texas, and Tom Gorman, Seattle, a semifinalist last year, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2 over Bernard Mignot of Belgium.

Alex Olmedo of Encino, Calif., the 1959 champion, lost in the second round, 6-0, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3 to Australia's Ian Fletcher.

Of the 27 American girls entered, four of the five who saw action advanced to the second round. Miss Goolagong's match was the only second round match played.

Third seeded Nancy Richey Guntero of San Angelo, Tex., beat Vicki Lancaster of Australia, 6-2, 6-1; Janet Newbury, La Jolla, Calif., beat Katja Ebbinghaus of Germany, 6-3, 6-1: Mary Ann Eisel of St. Louis, Mo., beat Michele Gurdal of Belgium, 6-2, 6-4, and Pam Teeguarden of Los Angeles beat Corrine Molesworth, a British Wightman Cupper, 9-8, 6-1.

A crowd of just under 26,000 saw the action on what is traditionally ladies day at the 12 day tournament.

Statton's 156 Paces Boys Golf Tourney

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer

Despite bogeying four of the last five holes Steve Statton figures he had a good day.

Statton finished with a 76 Tuesday at Hillcrest Country Club in the Lincoln City Junior Boys Golf Championships. Combined with his first-day score of 80, Statton's 156 gives him a three-stroke lead in the meet.

First-day leader John Hergert carded an 80 Tuesday and is alone at 159.

Then comes Dean Walker at 162, Mike Hughett at 163, Scott Lawson at 164, Jerry Ficke and Steve Gohde at 165 and Bob Anderson at 166.

Rich Spangler and Steve Lily with 170s join the group in the championship flight for the last two days of play. Holmes Park will be the scene of Wednesday's 18 holes with the final 18 at Pioneers Park.

The 50 golfers were divided up into five flights after Tuesday's action.

Statton was one-under-par going to No. 14's tee but said he "had trouble putting" on the last five holes. "I just couldn't make any kind of putt regardless of length," Statton said.

He bogeyed 14 including three putts, parred 15, bogeyed 16, double bogeyed 17 and bogeyed 18.

"I also had three putts on No. 17 and was only five or six feet from the cup at the start," Statton recalled. "But up until then I was playing great."

Statton birdied Nos. 1, 6, 9 and 10 in making the turn in 36.

Hergert's round was just the opposite of Statton's, recording a 43 on the front nine and 37 on the back. "I had trouble with my putting on the front nine," Hergert said.

"I missed a lot of putts six and seven feet from the hole. I seemed to go in streaks — a bad streak on the front and good streak on the back," he noted.

"Even on the back side I was scrambling quite a bit. I chipped in for a par on 13 and on 16 I had about a 50-footer after hitting a tree," Hergert said.

By The Associated Press

Jim Fregosi singled in two runs in the first inning then lashed a tie-breaking three-run home run as the New York Mets defeated Pittsburgh 7-4 Tuesday, trimming the Pirates' lead in the National League East to one game.

Pittsburgh had a 4-2 lead when Willie Stargell singled and Richie Hebner homered in the second, Al Oliver homered in the fourth and Dave Cash scored on Oliver's sacrifice in the sixth.

The Mets tied it in the sixth and then went ahead on Fregosi's blast.

Rosenbloom: Swap Imminent

. . . COLT OWNER TO EVENTUALLY BUY LA RAMS, THEN TRADE

BALTIMORE (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of the Baltimore Colts said Tuesday the proposed swapping of his franchise for that of the Los Angeles Rams appears imminent.

Rosenbloom said the deal almost went through a couple of weeks ago and that he was now hopeful "that it will happen within the next day or two."

In any event, Rosenbloom told N. P. Clark of the Baltimore News American, "it will have to happen before either of these teams go into training or it won't happen at all. Anything else would be out of the question."

Rosenbloom was reported to be visiting friends on Long Island, N.Y., while his son Steve, president of the National Football League team, could not be reached for comment in Baltimore.

Meanwhile, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle assured Gov. Marvin Mandel of Maryland that a league franchise would remain in Baltimore no matter who owns the Colts.

"The governor called the commissioner," a spokesman in Mandel's office said, "and asked simply: "Will such a trade affect the franchise?"

"The commissioner personally assured the governor that a franchise will remain in Baltimore, no matter what happens."

According to published reports, the Rams' franchise would be sold to a group headed by Robert Irsay of Skokie, Ill., and Willard "Bud" Keland of Racine, Wis., and then traded for the Colts. The players on both teams would not be moved.

The Tampa, Fla. Tribune quoted a confidential "bargaining table" source as reaffirming the sale-swap, saying:

"It looks like this will be done. Only a money foulup — nobody expects that — can stop it. The owners will approve it. No reason not to."

In a story for its Wednesday editions, the newspaper reported "the Dan Reaves estate will sell the Rams for about $18 million to Robert Irsay and Bud Keland of Chicago-Milwaukee Area Enterprises.

"That twosome will then swap the Rams to Rosenbloom, sole owner of the Colts. New management will be set up in both front offices."

Mandel also made an effort Tuesday to contact Irsay and Keland, inviting them to attend the meeting to discuss plans for the news sports complex in Baltimore.

The Rams are scheduled to open their training camp in Long Beach, Calif., on July 9, and the Colts in Tampa, Fla., on July 19.

Rosenbloom contended Rozelle's investigation of the proposed transfer is the only thing holding up the swap, which also must be approved by 20 of the 26 NFL clubs.

The Colts' owner denied reports that a tax problem was standing in the way. "As soon as the league is ready we can go ahead," he said. In Los Angeles Monday, President William A. Barnes of the Rams had raised the issue of tax angles, "plus the approval of the league and the courts."

Although the Los Angeles franchise is regarded as the more expensive property, Rosenbloom said a swap would not involve any cash payments.

A new Baltimore owner, however, would pick up $1.8 million still due the Colts for moving to the American Conference under the NFL realignment two years ago.

"It actually represents $2.4 million the new Ram ownership would pick up," Rosenbloom said. "The Los Angeles club's share of those payments is $200,000 a year for the three years. They'd save that much."

A trading of the franchises would result in a huge tax savings for Rosenbloom. Since he is believed to have pledged only $13,000 when he took over the Colts in 1953, a direct sale would result in a capital gains tax of $3.5 million or more.

WHA's Blazers Seek White Of Black Hawks

By BILL CHRISTINE
(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — With Bobby Hull's signing of a World Hockey Association contract, the new league is now training its sights on still another member of the NHL Chicago Black Hawks — star defenseman Bill White.

In St. Paul, Minn., where Hull signed a 10-year player-coach contract with the Winnipeg Jets Tuesday for $2.5 million, Johnny McKenzie said his new WHA team, the Philadelphia Blazers, is negotiating with "a couple of outstanding members of the Black Hawks."

McKenzie just recently jumped from the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League to the WHA in Philadelphia, where he became player-coach, of the Blazers.

White, a West Division all-star defenseman this past season, is on the negotiating list of the Blazers as a result of the WHA's "draft" of NHL talent last February.

Bill Wirtz, president of the Black Hawks, said it was possible that the WHA is interested in White, a 33-year-old veteran who came to Chicago from the Los Angeles Kings in 1970.

"I know Bill has coaching aspirations," Wirtz said, "And it seems like the new league is the place where you can play some and coach at the same time."

Lightweight Championship Fight Comes To Controversial End

. . . BUCHANAN CLAIMS FOUL—AFTER THE BELL; NEW CHAMPION DISAGREES

By MILTON RICHMAN

New York (UPI) — Only the two of them were there in the room now, father and son.

It was what the novelists call the moment of truth.

Ken Buchanan, his eyes bloodshot, his features swollen and his lightweight championship spirited away by Roberto Duran, a little Panamanian Buzzsaw, via a TKO at the end of the 13th round, looked glumly at his father.

Tom Buchanan, who manages his son, waited for him to say something and finally Ken Buchanan did.

"I can't understand how I can lose a title on a foul," he muttered, taking off his tartan-colored boxing trunks before moving toward the shower.

Tom Buchanan put his arm around his son.

"You gave your heart to the fight," he said. "You couldn't give anymore."

The fight, scheduled for 15 rounds, had ended in sheer bedlam.

Buchanan, the pride of Scotland, and Duran, the power of Panama, had continued fighting after the bell sounded ending the 13th and suddenly Buchanan was groveling on the canvas, clutching his groin with both hands while all the pain in the world was mirrored in his face.

For an instant, nobody was quite sure what had happened.

Gil Clancy, one of Buchanan's handlers, climbed swiftly through the ropes, conversed briefly with the writhing Scotsman and appealed to referee Johnny Lobianco marking his scorecard in a neutral corner.

Lobianco eventually moved across the canvas to where Buchanan was lying, watched him struggle to his feet, then jacknife over in pain again, and declared the fight over and Duran the winner.

"No, No, No," screamed Clancy.

"Yes, Yes, Yes," repeated Lobianco.

The crowd of 18,821 at Madison Square Garden was stunned, not so much over the fact that Duran was the new champ, after all he was far ahead on all the officials' scorecards, but by the fact that Buchanan clearly was implying he was fouled. And to make it worse, after the bell.

Some of those filing out of the Garden didn't like the way the fight had ended. They didn't like it at all, and tney said so.

After all, Buchanan was way behind, wasn't he?

The only way he could possibly keep his title was by a knockout, wasn't it?

What better time for a bit of play acting?

Could it possibly be true? Could Buchanan have simply pretended he was hit or kneed in the groin?

The question was a delicate one but someone put it point-blank to Tom Buchanan. Was it at all possible his son had pretended?

Tom Buchanan's eyes narrowed at that one.

He is, after all, a father, and no father likes hearing something like that about his son.

"Never," Tom Buchanan said quietly but firmly. "Never, never."

"Why are you so sure?" the questioner persisted.

"Because I know my boy," said the elder Buchanan. "I always said he never lost the title, he'd have to be knocked out. He'd never quit. Mind you now, I'd never regret his losing the title to a better fighter. That didn't happen tonight. Duran may go on to become a better champion but he wasn't tonight. I wish to make one thing plain: We're not cry babies. We've always come to America and gotten a square deal. We're not blaming the American people. Only one man is partially to blame, and that's the referee. He let Duran get away with everything."

Ken Buchanan said substantially the same thing.

He wasn't sure whether it was a punch or a knee he took below the belt but he was sure it was something.

Duran, he said, kept "getting away with hell, murder" and the referee "gave me no protection whatsoever. Duran is a good fighter. I give him that, but I can assure you, as God is my witness, he never hurt me."

For his part, the 21-year-old coffee-colored Duran couldn't understand what all the fuss was about.

What foul, he wanted to know?

An interpreter tried explaining it to him.

"A lotta boxers have tried making that same claim before," said Duran. "What is he talking about 'A knee?' I hit him with a punch in the kidney."

After the bell?

What about a return?

"That's up to my manager."

Duran's manager, Carlos Eleta, said he was "not satisfied" with the way the fight ended, and Buchanan could have a return bout in November. Buchanan says he'll take it.

With a different referee though.

Fight Pledged Against Olympic Ban On Convicts

New York (AP)—A group of sports figures and prison officials said Tuesday they would fight an attempt to bar tow American convicts from competing in the summer Olympic games in Munich, Germany.

The group included William Vanden Heuvel, chairman of New York City's Board of Corrections, and Jose Torres, former world lightheavyweight boxing champion.

Vanden Heuvel said at a news conference that he had appealed to West German Chancellor Willy Brandt to turn back the eligibility challenge. He raised the possibility that U.S. athletes might boycott the games on an individual basis.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said earlier this month that Bobby Lee Hunter, a boxer, and Gene White, a high jumper, might not be welcome at the games. Willi Daume, head of Germany's Olympic organizing committee, objected to Hunter's participation.

"We do believe in the possibility of redemption," Venden Heuvel said. "We believe the prison is more than a place to put a man in a cage."

Hunter, 21, is serving an 18-year term for manslaughter in South Carolina, and White, 21, a two-year forgery sentence in Pennsylvania.

"I think Willy Brandt is the kind of man who will understand wha twe're saying here today," said Vanden Heuvel.

"I personally think there are many athletes in this country who will make an individual decision to boycott on this issue," Vanden Heuvel said, adding that he was not now advocating such action.

Hunter won a bronze medal at the Pan-American games in Cali, Columbia, last year and competed for the United States in Great Britain and the Soviet Union earlier this year without controversy.

He is imprisoned in South Carolina's Manning Correctional Institution for killing a man in a knife fight. A correction officer there, Ray Satterfield, has been encouraging Hunter's boxing career as a means of rehabilitation.

White has high jumped 7 feet 2 inches. He has been confined to Centre County Jail in Bellefonte, Pa., his sentence was two months to two years for check forgery, and he is nearing release on parole.

Vanden Heuvel has written to Daume, decrying the official's assertion that the United States should forbid Hunter to seek a place on the team because he is not a suitable "example to youth."

Female Thinclads Enter 2 AAU Meets This Week

The Nebraska Track Club whose mile relay team last week set a new United States Junior National AAU record, will be entering the National AAU Girl's Track and Field Championships on Wednesday and Thursday and the National AAU Women's Track and Field Championships on Saturday and Sunday.

Both meets are being held at Canton, Ohio.

The mile quartet includes Mary Hemberger, Kenesaw, Charlyce Remington, Lebanon Beaver Valley, Karol McKenzie, Elwood, and Debbie Quillen, Dix.

Debbie Quillen will also compete in the girl's 220, while Karol McKenzie, will run the girl's 440. Charlyce Remington ran second in the Junior National 880 in 2:20.0, which is the fastest Nebraska girl's 880 in history.

She will probably be forced to drop down to the 440 for the Girl's National since she did not have a fast enough qualifying time in the 880 until the Junior National Meet.

Colleen Kindig of Hastings will long jump in the girl's division and run the 100 yard dash.

Toni Churchill of Lincoln, title holder in the girl's high jump and third place finisher in the women's high jump in 1970 injured an ankle at the Junior National Championships and will not be able to compete.

Nebraska Staff Preparing For All-Star Game

Coach Bob Devaney and his Nebraska assistants are moving into the final stages of their pre-Chicago preparations for the All-Star game with the Dallas Cowboys of the NFL on July 28 at Soldier Field.

The Husker staff, which will skipper the College All-Stars, has been hard at work studying films of the NFL Champion Cowboys and plotting strategy for the summer classic on Chicago's lakefront.

Devaney and Co. will move their All-Star headquarters from the NU Coliseum to Evanston, Ill., (the collegians train at Northwestern) on July 6.

Husker Football Guide Orders Being Taken

Nebraska's 1972 Football Guide, printed for the news media and made available for the public at $2, has gone to the printer on schedule.

Loaded with many new features—including a 16-page color section—as well as Cornhusker history, records and player profiles, the 1972 Guide may be ordered by contacting the Sports Information Office at NU.

Huskers' List Recuperating From Surgery

Jerry List, Nebraska's standout tight end on the 1970 and 1971 national championship teams, is recuperating from back surgery and his status for this fall is cloudy.

The senior star injured his back in a volleyball game and had to have a disc removed.

If List is sidelined, which appears likely for the early going, junior letterman Brent Longwell will be the heir apparent at tight end.

Drill Team To Perform

The Blue and Gold Pacers of North Platte High School, a girls drill team, has accepted an invitation from the Nebraska coaches Association to perform at halftime of the All-Star High School Basketball Game on Aug. 18 in Lincoln.

The cost is underwhelming.

Black Hawks' Hull Jumps To Winnipeg

St. Paul, Minn. (AP)—Superstar Bobby Hull, saying he has no regrets about leaving the National Hockey League, signed the first of two World Hockey Association contracts Tuesday worth $2.5 million for 10 years as player-coach of the Winnipeg Jets.

"I have no ax to grind, no regrets about my decision," said Hull, the 33-year-old left wing who scored 604 regular-season goals in 15 years with the Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL.

Hull flew to St. Paul aboard a chartered jet from Winnipeg to sign a contract with the new WHA and receive a certified check for $1 million from Gary L. Davidson, WHA president.

Hull, Davidson and Winnipeg Jets' President Ben Hatskin then reboarded the plane for a return trip to Winnipeg, where Hull was to sign a $1.5 million contract with the Jets. Davidson called the deal "the greatest one-man contract in professional sports."

A WHA spokesman said the deal should net Hull more than $3 million during the term of the contract, with additional income from endorsements of WHA Properties Ltd. products.

Hull predicted that Arthur and William Wirtz, executives of the Black Hawks, would not go to court in an attempt to bar him from playing with the WHA, which begins play for the first time in October.

"I don't think they will," said Hull, who was the leading active scorer and second all-time goal producer in the NHL.

"I think they would be barking up the wrong tree. I think they will consider this as a business transaction. I know I had some difficulties with them a few years ago but all that is resolved and didn't figure in my decision," he said.

NHL President Clarence Campbell said in Miami, "I have no comment to make until I see a further report."

Hull was asked what his loss would mean to the Black Hawks, who finished in last place in the East Division four years ago, when Hull missed the first six weeks of the season after a contract dispute.

"They got along without me before," Hull said. "They still have a lot of good players." Hull said his main concern now is "getting the WHA off the ground.

"I think the money involved does more good to boost my incentive to play hockey," he said, adding that he plans to play at least five more years.

Asked if other Chicago players would follow him into the new league, Hull said, "That remains to be seen. Several of the players have already signed. Dennis Hull Bobby's younger brother regretfully signed early in the season."

Hull said he made up his mind not to turn down the WHA offer a few weeks ago, but added: "This is the climax of it all."

Special Racing Set At Sunset Speedway

Omaha — Sunset Speedway has announced plans to hold "THE BIG RACE" of 1972 at it's 4/10 Mile Dirt Track.

The two-day event will offer a total purse of $7,500.00 — with qualifying races on Sunday at 8 p.m. Additional qualifying will be allowed Monday, plus the 100 Lap Non-Stop "BIG RACE".

Contracts OK'd For Offices

Governor J. James Exon gave his approval Tuesday to contracts for construction of the Athletic Office Building under the South Stadium at the University of Nebraska Lincoln Campus.

According to the program statement, the building will be a complete new three-level facility.

Field level will contain a team dressing room for varsity football, a physical therapy and treatment area, weight training rooms, an equipment room, showers and dressing facilities and mechanical equipment space.

With the construction of this facility, some of the office space requirements will be deleted from the Proposed Field House.

Funding for this project will be from the Athletic Cash Fund, and no General Funds will be used.

Winnipeg Happy Over Hull

. . . NEARLY 3,000 CELEBRATE WHA SIGNING OF STAR

Winnipeg, Canada (AP) —A traffic patrolman couldn't resist the pun: "This is one Hull of a traffic jam."

The officer estimated that between 3,000 and 5,000 persons of Winnipeg's 525,000 inhabitants stopped traffic for one hour at the city's busiest intersection of catch a glimpse of hockey's Golden Jet, Bobby Hull.

Hull had just signed contracts with the new World Hockey Association and the Winnipeg Jets for $2.5 million and was escorted in a motorcade from a hotel to the insection of Portage and Main.

Hundreds more had lined the streets to watch the Hull caravan led by a convertible carrying the former Chicago Black Hawks' great left-winger, his wife and three of their five children.

There was one slight incident—the convertible scraped against the side of a police car while making a U—Turn just before crowd had gathered. The policeman, expressionless, waved the Hull party on through.

Hull, Winnipeg Jets' owner Don Hatskin and WHA President Gary L. Davidson reenacted the signing that had just occured at the Hotel Fort Garry and earlier in the day in St. Pau.

In the Minnesota city, Hull and his family rode in a motorcade in a 1934 Rolls Royce. Hull remarked later, "Joanne saw an antique shop and wanted to stop."

Mrs. Hull said later that she deals in antiques and was wondering about continuing her hobby in Winnipeg.

"I would like to have a separate house on the farm for my antiques," she said. "I have a lot of private showings. I never make any money at it though because I always buy some more."

Mrs. Hull had another concern.

"Are there enough rinks in Winnipeg for the boys to get enough ice time," said Mrs. Hull, a native of Los Angeles and former figure-skating teacher. "In Chicago, sometime the boys played three games a day."

Accompanying the Hulls in the two-country expedition were their three oldest sons, Bobby Jr., 11; Blake, 10; and Brett, 8. Bart and Michelle, 3 and 2, respectively, remained in Chicago.

Black Hawk Fans Not Mad At Hull

CHICAGO (AP) — A sampling of Chicago hockey fans Tuesday showed that most felt Bobby Hull, the flashing Black Hawks left wing they idolized for 15 years, would have been foolish not to accept the $2.5 million offered by the budding World Hockey Association.

Hull, 33, quit the Black Hawks of the National Hockey League Tuesday and signed the whopping contract with the fledgling Winnipeg Jets.

"How can you falt Bobby?" asked Marvin Barski, 27, who became a Black Hawk fan "in Bobby's rookie season. "I've had two season tickets to Hawks games for 10 years. Hull was treated okay by the Black Hawks, but he gave them every bit of what he got."

"I think he's very smart," added Dennis Mascari, who goes to Chicago Stadium "several times a season." He added that Hull, the second leading goal scorer in NHL history, "is getting older. I don't think he's through, but he's past his peak."

The Black Hawks were silent about Hull's departure. Neither Bill Wirtz, president; Tommy Ivan, general manager, nor Coach Billy Reay were available to comment.

Wirtz said late Monday, however, "I think he'll probably sign with the other league ... "He did.

Vitually all the Black Hawk players had returned to their homes in Canada for the summer and were not available for comment on Hull's signing with Winnipeg.

But the fans had no illusions about losing Hull.

Barski said, "They will be in trouble without him."

Mascari added, "They weren't that good with him. Face it, they played in the puppy division. If they were in the East Division they'd have been third or fourth."

The Hawks won the West Division title last season but were eliminated by the New York Rangers in the semifinal round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"It's the smartest thing he could have done," said Mrs. White Worcester, who goes to several games a year with her husband. "With his limited years left, it's really a smart move. Of course, I'll be sorry to see him go."

Suit Filed Against McDaniels

NEW YORK (AP) —A suit against Jim McDaniels, who broke a $1.5-million contract with the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association to play for the Seattle SuperSonics, was filed Tuesday in state supreme Court.

Athletes Advisory Group, which negotiated Daniels' pact with the Cougars, claimed in its suit, which also names as efendants the SuperSonics - and the National Basketball Association, that the former Western Kentucky star paid it $10,000 in commissions and still owes $65,000.

Under the contract, signed by McDaniels in 1970 when he was a student, he was to begin playing for Carolina in the 1972 season, and was to receive $1,425,000 for six seasons, the suit said.

In addition, the contract called for him to receive three Cadillacs every two years; his mother was to receive $7,500 annually for 10 years as a member of the Cougars' public relations staff; and he was to receive $2,000 for housing and $2,000 for undergraduate tuition.

McDaniels repudiated the contract on Feb. 17, 1972 and agreed to play for Seattle for the remainder of the 1971-2 season.

The plaintiff alleged in its suit that the SuperSonics, the NBA "and others" consiired to "interfere with valuable contractual rights between McDaniels and the Cougars, and between McDaniels and the AAG, and "in furtherance of that conspiracy induced McDaniels to repudiate his agreement with the Cougars."

Minnesotans Get Final Berths

Anoka, Minn. (AP) — Seven Minnesota wrestlers, led by identical twins Dave and Jim Hazenwinkel and Larry Lyden moved into the finals Tuesday at the U.S. Olympic Greco-Roman wrestling trials.

Four men remained in competition in all the 10 weights. The top three finishers in each will qualify for the Olympic training camp at the University of Minnesota July 25 through Aug. 15.

Lyden, of Mounds View, had registered four pins in as many matches while only being on the mat for a combined 157 seconds.

Both Hazenwinkels, from Coon Rapids, were also undefeated.

Huge Chris Taylor, the 400-pound heavyweight from Iowa State, continued his march for a second trial championship, remaining undefeated through the four rounds of Greco-Roman competition. Last week, Taylor was the top finisher in the freestyle competition.

Also bidding for a second trial title was Henry Schenk of Portland, Ore., wrestling in the 220 pound division.

The football star later married Miss Sandra L. Lemon, 28, whom he met about a year ago while she was a secretary in Washington, D.C. this was the first marriage for Miss Lemon.

Unitas married his first wife Nov. 20, 1954, at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Locally-Started Industries Need Help In Early Days

Locally-started industries need help, particularly in their early days, according to the June issue of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln publication Business in Nebraska, which took a look at some successful home-grown industries and sought some guiding principles from their developers.

Many Nebraskans who have started new industries have found as did Bennie Herboldsheimer of the Benaire Manufacturing Company of Potter, that "the first years can be lonely years . . . there are times when it would be easy to quit," reports Bureau of Business Research Editorial Assistant Mrs. Dorothy Switzer.

Those early days are the times when the new industrialist needs the support and encouragement of his community, some evidence of its interest in what he is trying to do, and some appreciation of his problems, notes Mrs. Switzer.

Sufficient Capital

Almost without exception, successful innovators who have established home-grown industries emphasize the point that it is necessary to have sufficient start-up capital to enable the business to weather the early years before the operation becomes profitable.

In many cases, start-up capital has been provided by local banks or other financial institutions. But in some instances such institutions have felt unable to provide risk or venture capital to carry a plant while product quality is being established and public acceptance is being won.

Mrs. Switzer notes, however, that there is evidence that the federal government is becoming interested in rural industrial development and that state and local development groups are giving more support to homegrown industries.

Nebraska's home-grown industries give the state much reason for pride, she writes, noting that they contribute in myriad ways to the economic and social development of the state and produce a wide variety of hgh quality products that have won nationwide and worldwide acceptance.

Variety of Products

Cited by Mrs. Switzer in her article were home-grown industries from throughout Nebraska which produce a variety of products such as Herboldsheimer's Benaire Manufacturing Company which produces tractor cab air conditioners; Grain State Soya, Inc., of West Point, a major producer of soybean livestock feeds;

Century Manufacturing of Aurora; Crawford Wood Products of Crawford; Allmand Brothers of Holdrege; Lindsay Manufacturing of Lindsay; Tratofflor of Waterloo; Rowse Hydraulic Rakes of Burwell; Merrick Machine of Alda;

The S. and W. Supply, Inc., of Kearney; Brownie Manufacturing Company, Inc., of Waverly; Miller Weeder Co. Inc., of Stratton; Grayson Tool Co. of Minden; and Platte Valley Foods Inc. of Wahoo.

One of the firms she tells of, Lichter Duo-Rest, Inc., is one that chose to originate in Nebraska. Owner Harry Lichter points to local workers as the reason he and his associates from Detroit selected Scottsbluff as the site for their plant which builds trailer furniture.

"If you think every worker we have isn't an inspector, you don't know small town people. They have a community pride in everything produced here," Lichter says.

High Quality

The successful small industrialists quoted by Mrs. Switzer point out the necessity for having a good idea that has a useful function and for plenty of financial backing. But even more important to them seems to be the necessity for high quality.

The tenet expressed over and over by Nebraska enterpreneurs was: "Be sure to maintain the high quality of your product. Proceed with caution and expand only as sales grow. Never sacrifice quality for quantity."

Or, as the founder of Rowse Hydraulic Rakes Company, Inc., Freeman Rowse of rural Burwell, puts it: "Quality will bring quantity."

McGovern Assailed

St. Louis (AP) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew assailed Sen. George McGovern, calling him a candidate who stands for "the doctrine of retreat overseas and radicalism at home."

Berg Says Thone Used Bish Again To Poke Matzke

Democratic congressional nominee Darrel Berg of Lincoln Monday said Congressman Charles Thone has "once again" used Republican State Chairman Milan Bish to make "ridiculous charges" against State Economic Development Director Stanley Matzke.

"Throughout his personal campaign to force Stan's removal (as Berg's campaign chairman), Mr. Thone has revealed his strong aversion for political controversy," Berg said.

"For a month he has worked behind the scenes to bring about Stan's resignation as campaign chairman. I do not think that I am the one who should tell this story.

"But I hope it will be told during the course of the campaign."

Berg last week asked Matzke to resign as his campaign chairman because, he said Republican leaders had threatened to damage Nebraska's economic development program if Matzke continued as chairman.

Rally Try Fizzles In Market

New York (AP) — A weak attempt at a rally faded by midsession Tuesday, and the stock market wound up the session with small losses.

Trading was quiet throughout the day as invetors awaited signs that the international monetary situation was stabilizing. The stock market had sustained sharp losses in the wake of Britain's decision late last week to float the pound.

Analysts attributed the small gains early in Tuesday's session to selective buying in issues that were underpriced due to recent market declines.

They said the inability of the market to sustain a rally led some investors back to the sidelines, pending further developments in the monetary situation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks finished the day off 1.13 at 935.28.

Of the 1,746 issues traded on the Big Board, declines outpaced advances 768 to 610. Volume of 13.75 million shares were up slightly from the 12.73 million shares which changed hands Monday.

The New York Stock Exchange, index of more than 1,400 common stocks closed down .05 to 59.41, while Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off .11 to 107.37.

The Asssociated Press 60-stock average dropped 1.1 to 322.4, a new 1972 low. Industrials were off .8, rails were down 1.6 and utilities were off .1.

The most-actively traded Big Board stock was H&R Block, down 1½ at 14¼ on 445,300 shares, including a block of 354,000 shares at 13½.

The Big Board said 97 blocks of 10,000 shares or more were traded Tuesday, compared with a revised total of 84 such blocks Monday.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index dipped .03 to 27.24 as 3.44 million shares changed bit higher, 3.85 million shares. Of the hands. Volume Monday had been a 1,171 Amex issues traded, 497 declined, and 365 advanced.

Corporate bonds were lower and U.S. governments were higher.

Trading Is Slower

Omaha, Neb. (AP) —Fed cattle prices reacted to the previous session's sharp increases Tuesday with a slower paced trading day but demand was still rated good.

Grain-fat steers in the run were rated steady with some plainer offerings 25 cents off. Heifers were mostly steady.

Around five loads of high choice and prime steers were noted at the top of the 39.25-39.50 bracket, bulk choice offerings were marked 37.75-39.00.

Well finished heifers 950-1,025 lbs. brought 38.00-38.25, most choice 36.75-38.00. Two loads of choice 707 lb. feeder steers earned 42.00.

The 65th season of the Lincoln Municipal Band summer concert series begins at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Antelope Park bandshell.

Six concerts, each composed to suit a wide range of musical tastes, will be held during the summer.

Sunday's concert will feature vocal solos by Virginia Parker, "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "Everything is Beautiful", and a trumpet solo by Lester Monts, Morrissey's "Soliloquy".

Other selections will range from John Phillip Sousa's "U.S. Field Artillery March" to a medley of tunes from the Broadway musical, "Westside Story".

Directing the band will be John Shildneck. He has held that post for nearly half of the band's 65-year existence.

The concerts are free, sponsored by the city and the American Federation of Musicians.

Woman, Game Officials Battle Over Baby Deer

Griffin, Ga. (UPI) — A 3-week-old fawn that sleeps with a protective Dachshund, drinks Coca-Cola and eats peppermint candy, is the center of a struggle between its keeper who wants it for a pet, and State Game and Fish officials.

The fawn now lives at the home of Mrs. Darryl Crumbley, who took it in after "a friend of mine was harvesting a field, cutting wheat, and almost ran over him with a combine. I can't give the friend's name because it's illegal to take a deer. The deer still has scars on his face where he was cut."

The trouble is that state officials won't give Mrs. Crumbley, who has three children, six goats, four cats, four dogs and a wild turtle already, a permit to keep the fawn.

State law makes it illegal to "hold or possess birds or animals for the purpose of propogation or pets" without first obtaining a state permit.

"We're not granting any new permits," State Game and Fish Director Jack Crockford said Tuesday.

"We now issue permits only for public facilities like zoos and for the University of Georgia, which has a wildlife disease study program," said Crockford.

But attempts to take the fawn away from Mrs. Crockford so far have been unsuccessful.

When Game and Fish Department officials came to her house last week to get the deer, after refusing her application for a permit, Mrs. Crumbley packed the little fawn into the back seat of her car, its legs wrapped to prevent it from jumping, and went to see Gov. Jimmy Carter and Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox.

She led it around the state Capitol on a leash and "he wasn't any problem. He thoroughly enjoyed it. He won the heart of everybody at the state Capitol that day," she said.

Though Carter and Maddox were sympathetic, she said, there was nothing either could do. Those matters come under the authority of fish and game officials.

And those officials aren't budging.

Crockford noted that Mrs. Crumbley keeps the deer in an 18 by 6 utility room that he shares with a pet dog, and said of the Cokes and candy, "it doesn't seem like much of a diet to me."

Become Troublesome

Wild deer become troublesome when they reach maturity, Crockford said, and their keepers "have second thoughts."

"By then, it's too late. If they are released into the wild, they can't take care of themselves.

"They become a real problem, particularly with bucks, and particularly in the fall during breeding season. It's a truly dangerous animal. No matter how gentle they've been, they'll turn on you. No matter how tame you think they are, during the fall of the year they simply cannot be trusted."

Crockford said Mrs. Crumbley once agreed to have the animal taken to the University of Georgia, but apparently changed her mind.

"The only way they'll take him from me is if they want to bring a Gatling gun out here after me," she said.

Four Men Arraigned In Mutilation Beating

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Four Council Bluffs men face arraignment in Municipal Court Wednesday on charges of assault with intent to commit murder in connection with the mutilation-beating of a young man.

Eight other persons also faced arraignment after they were booked on suspicion of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Police Chief Nick Sulentic termed the incident "one of the most sadistic things that has ever happened in Council Bluffs."

The victim was listed in critical condition Tuesday night at Mercy Hospital.

Authorities said the victim, who appeared to be between 25 and 30 years old, carried no identification. He was found in a weed-filled vacant lot adjacent to an apartment house parking lot in eastern Council Bluffs early Tuesday. A witness told police the assaulted man had been at a party in an upstairs apartment just prior to being found in the lot.

Police said the victim had been stomped, kicked and had cuts all over his body. He had been castrated and his lips and tongue were cut, several teeth were broken and he received numerous head cuts and bruises, police said.

Police booked 13 persons in connection with the incident, charging William L. Belt, 24, Gary W. Hicks, 18, Kenneth J. Still, 23, and a 17-year-old boy whose name was withheld and who may be transferred to juvenile court, officials said.

The four charged were held in city jail in lieu of $10,000 bond each. A fifth person, Joe D. Szolek, 39, Omaha, was booked as a material witness and released from custody.

Nine persons arrested near the vacant lot were booked on the delinquency charge after police said they found beer and minors at the party. Three of the nine, who told officers they lived at the apartment, were also to face drug-related charges.

The ninth person, an 18-year-old girl, was freed on $200 bond and a court appearance date was not set.

Banana Growers Seek Alternate Shipping Means

Kingston, Jamaica (AP) — Banana growers here have decided to take action to get their bananas over to the United Kingdom market despite a strike of banana workers at two leading banana loading ports. The stoppage resulted in 1,700 tons of bananas being tied up at the wharves since last week.

Plans have been made to ship bananas through the Montego Bay freeport, and efforts are being made to scout out other ports from which bananas can be shipped.

Lincoln church news is carried on a special page in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

California Ballot To Get Pot Issue

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — California voters will decide in November whether to legalize marijuana use in the nation's most populous state, the state's top election official announced Tuesday.

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said that a voter initiative to legalize the private use of marijuana by adults has qualified with more than the 325,594 signatures of registered voters required to place it on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Brown said an unofficial canvass of returns from California's 58 counties found the petitions for legalization of marijuana have signatures of 338,187 voters.

The initiative measure would allow persons 18 and older to grow marijuana for their personal use and to possess and smoke it, but sales would still be against the law.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
